7-UP[®] IS THE MAN'S MIXER

(It never smothers that good whiskey flavor!)

One right any man has is to demand flavor in his highball. Real whiskey flavor. Seven-Up sees to it that you get it. You're going to notice right off how 7-Up rounds out whiskey flavor . . . smooths it. But smother it? Never! You get a drink that's rich, hearty tasting. And 7-Up has such vigorous sparkle you don't stir it. Seven-Up stirs itself. Try it, Man! 7-Up. The man's mixer.

Giving Thanks- EVERY DAY

One excellent way that we can show our gratitude to God for His many blessings, in addition to giving thanks often and humbly, is to share our good fortune as much as possible with others, especially with those who are burdened with handicaps of one kind or another and who are, therefore, more in need than some of the helping hand that we can lend them.

We Elks are doing that with magnificent generosity through our lodges, through our Elks National Foundation, and on an ever growing scale through our State Elks Associations and their major projects.

A tabulation of figures in the latest Directory published by the State Associations Committee showed that our State Associations last year spent the impressive total of more than $2,500,000 for a wide variety of philanthropic programs.

These programs include summer camps, aid to the cerebral palsied, the blind and other physically handicapped children, speech therapy, dental care, scholarship aid, cancer research, and many others, all of them eminently worthwhile.

It is impossible to put a monetary value on the good that these programs accomplish in terms of increasing human happiness.

It is also impossible to calculate the good that they do us, as individuals who contribute to them and make them possible, or the good that they do our fraternity. This last is a most important consideration, which I commend most strongly to the Elks of those states that have not as yet organized a major project.

The simple fact is that when the Elks of a state are united behind a major program that is significant in scope and character, commanding the respect of the people of the state, it strengthens the lodges, builds a wonderful spirit within the fraternity of that state, and in every way helps to create a happier and stronger Elkdom.

We can do infinitely more good by working together, pooling our resources of men, money, and talent. By cooperating in our State Elks Associations to do good to our fellow men we can give thanks every day of the year for the blessings that we enjoy.

I hope that the wonderful programs carried on by so many of our State Elks Associations will serve as models for those states that are lagging in this respect.

ELKS NATIONAL FOUNDATION

"The Joy of Giving"

Aid to Education—Elks-Style

Appropriations for educational programs by the Elks National Foundation, for the year 1965-66 are at the all-time high of $475,500, the Foundation's Trustees have announced. The Foundation, which expends only the income on its investments and none of its principal fund, has in the current year allocated to State Associations 250 college scholarships valued at $600 each. This appropriation, totalling $150,000, represents an increase of $33,000 over the amount set aside last year for the program. "Most Valuable Student" awards, given to the nation's exemplary students in the annual, nationwide competition sponsored by the Foundation, have also been substantially increased. In the past, these scholarship awards have ranged from $700 to $1,500, with an aggregate value of $110,000. "Most Valuable Student" awards in the current year range from $800 to $1,500 and have a total value of $130,000. The Foundation's Emergency Educational Fund, which provides financing for the education of children of deceased or incapacitated Elks, has been increased from $60,000 to $80,000. And the Foundation's appropriation of $65,000 for grants for the training of specialists in the treatment of the cerebral palsied reflects an increase of almost $15,000 over last year's allocation for this program.

Thus, the Foundation—the major philanthropic agency of the Order—demonstrates anew that education is deemed a most appropriate and useful area for disbursing its funds; that an unshakable faith in American youth is among the finest traditions of Elkdom. Next month, this column will list the number of scholarships allocated to each State Association so that all Elks may see how some of the dividends from their contributions are coming back home to be put to work.

A CP Study Grant

Miss Eloise Whyte of Norfolk, Va., recipient of a $300 Elks National Foundation grant to assist in financing a course in the study of cerebral palsy therapy at the University of Virginia, administers to a handicapped child. She is one of nearly 1,500 qualified persons who have received such grants, totaling more than $620,000, for this specialized training.

A New Dawn for the Mentally Retarded

By JAMES C. G. CONNIFF

At long last, America's mentally retarded—especially the children—are beginning to get the break they deserve. The public is starting to learn the facts about MR and to support the programs that offer new hope for those afflicted. But it is only a beginning; here are the facts everyone should know

THE WAITRESS, pleased with the size of her tip, hummed happily as she cleared the table. The customer, awaiting his change at the cash register, nodded in her direction. "Nice girl you've got there," he said to the manager. "Courteous. Friendly. Gets things straight the first time. See you treat her right."

The manager, a broad smile of agreement on his face, said, "Thank you, sir. We aim to. She is unusual." To himself he thought, More unusual than you know, friend. She's mentally retarded—and one of the best employees I've ever had.

An isolated case? It would have been 10 years ago, but not any more. An exciting change of outlook for the retarded—as exciting and vital to the nation as it is to the intellectually handicapped themselves—has taken place almost overnight. In increasing numbers, as the facts about them dispel the myths (they are not mentally ill, not crime-prone or sexually disoriented; most can learn, can hold jobs), the mentally retarded are coming into their own.

In manufacturing, merchandising, and distribution, as well as in service capacities, better than 85 percent of the nearly 6 million Americans who, like the waitress, were through no fault of their own born with a slower mental growth rate than the rest of us—but who, if given the chance, can progress further than we ever realized—now at last see opening before them what the late President Kennedy called "a productive and self-respecting life" of gainful employment.

If that change can be attributed to any one individual, it is to John F. Kennedy and to his compassionate determination that "our system of 'don't care'" for the retarded should yield to aggressive, all-out warfare against "this grave and complex problem" which threatens the futures of more than 300 newborn babies each day—126,000 a year—with the most heartbreaking of all forms of crippling: that of our master organ, the brain.

President Kennedy had his reasons for demanding, and getting, action. There was his sister Rosemary, living out Retarded youngsters attending day camps or residential camps are provided a recreational setting that is used as part of the therapy and educational process. Here some boys and girls are making molds of their handprints.

An MR success story: This retarded girl was successfully trained for work in a New Jersey factory, thus enabling her to earn her own way and to contribute both to society and to the economy. Many retarded children, given proper help, can do the same when they are old enough.

her days in a private institution. Just the quiet acknowledgment that the President of the United States had a mentally retarded sister, he knew, would help to dissipate the false shame and unfounded sense of guilt which had led too many families to hide their mentally retarded from sight. For all but the scant 5 percent of profoundly retarded whose mental levels we are not yet able to raise, this withdrawal reaction of uninformed parents—by isolating the afflicted child—only further reduces his already impaired capacity to learn.

But John Kennedy knew also that mere personal acknowledgment could hardly do more than improve morale a bit for those families (the vast majority) who were on the one hand unable to afford private institutional care, which comes high, and on the other stood little chance of getting a retarded child into a public institution, simply because all such facilities, badly understaffed and overcrowded, had an average of three-year waiting lists.

That stalemate raised in the President's mind three key questions: (1) How many of the retarded really needed to enter an institution; (2) what number might not actually suffer further disability from being institutionalized; and (3) how could he, as Chief Executive, prevent this from happening, and at the same time save the taxpayers the roughly $100,000 it costs to keep a single retarded person institutionalized for a lifetime?

With characteristic vigor, he awoke the conscience of the nation and its Congress to help find the answers to those questions, and to the still more basic puzzles of cause and prevention. Congress came through handsomely. A month before his assassination, John Kennedy had the satisfaction of signing into law two historic measures—both passed with bipartisan support.

By providing the means for all 50 States to join in mounting a coordinated assault on MR via new research and diagnostic centers, stepped-up maternal and child health care programs, and training for doctors, teachers, speech therapists, and other specialized personnel, those laws now enable other dedicated hands to carry on one of the most challenging pieces of unfinished business our young lost leader left us.

Few among those hands are more dedicated than those of Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey. Scientifically more knowledgeable than most men in government (he was trained as a pharmacist) and a veteran Senate champion of expanded health research activity by both federal and private agencies, the Vice-President also has a personal reason to push the fight against MR—pert little five-year-old, blonde Vicky, "the first granddaughter Mrs. Humphrey and I welcomed into the world, and so full of love it's enough to make your heart burst with yearning to help her develop her mind just as far as she possibly can."

Like most such children, Vicky is capable of doing just that—if she receives the right kind of help early enough. Thanks to our rapidly changing attitudes toward the retarded, Vicky is receiving that help (Minneapolis has one of the finest training centers in the country) and will have her chance to "take her place in society, perhaps as a hairdresser," in the words of her grandmother. This will not be because she is a Humphrey descendant, but because she and her retarded contemporaries are finally inheriting the long overdue era of "understanding, enlightenment, and hope" which John Kennedy had in mind for them, and which President Johnson's Committee on Mental Retardation—drawn from leaders of differing political hues—is committed to bringing about.

The bipartisan flavor of the rising tide against mental retardation appears perhaps nowhere so clearly as in a recent statement made by Maine Republican Senator Margaret Chase Smith: "Better education for the retarded child is a vital national need today. Education and rehabilitation for the handicapped are areas where national security does not require budget-cutting. . . . Financially, we simply cannot afford the loss in national (Continued on page 49)

Five-year-old Vicky Solomonson is the oldest grandchild of Vice-President and Mrs. Hubert Humphrey. Vicky is mentally retarded but is as warm, eager to play, and interested in her surroundings as her two normal sisters. Thanks to modern knowledge and techniques, she will have the chance to take her rightful place in society.

In Miami, Fla., retarded young men train to become butchers in a school operated by the butchers' union.

"Ask Not What Your Country Can Do For You . . . Ask What You Can Do For Your Country."

This memorable challenge of our late and beloved Brother of Boston, Massachusetts, Lodge, No. 10, the 35th President of the United States, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, should give deeper meaning to our observance of Veterans Day, November 11, 1965.

Truly, his life reflected his convictions. He gave unselfishly of his brilliant talents to his country—his brave war record, his accomplishments in the halls of Congress and finally, as our President, the supreme sacrifice was made. No one can dispute the personal fulfillment of his own challenge.

His patriotic contributions symbolize the sacrifices of millions of lesser known, but none the less dedicated, Americans whose memories are recalled on Veterans Day.

Veterans Day was originally called Armistice Day. Unfortunately, an armistice is not a peace and today, 47 years after the World War I Armistice, peace is still not a reality.

The temporary peace we enjoy in America today was made possible by veterans we honor during the one minute of reverent silence at the 11th hour on the 11th day of the 11th month. We should have eternal gratitude for those who strove and those who are now striving to attain an honorable, permanent peace for mankind.

Veterans Day should also signal an alarm against an enemy operating openly within our midst. We are all aware that the Communist-declared intention is to destroy the United States by infiltration, sabotage, revolution and armed conquest. Yet we complacently give the privileges of our democracy as a license to Communists, "pacifists," and others masquerading under various names and conducting campaigns to induce young Americans to refuse draft duty and to discourage our Armed Forces. We witnessed unconcernedly the student march on Washington last April protesting United States defense of South Vietnam. We are all aware of the picketing of Armed Forces' recruiting booths, draft-card burning, picketing of the United Nations, attempts to halt troop trains, college sit-ins, and publicized reports of more to come. These organized demonstrations are a sacrilege to the tribute intended for our veterans. Our nation's security, even in this nuclear age, depends in the last analysis upon the willingness of the nation's manhood to run the old risks and offer up the old sacrifices when only these can save the country. We cannot risk tampering with our national security by any group.

The thousands of veterans who have died, the thousands who suffer in Veterans Hospitals, the more than 23 million who were willing to die if necessary, have made sacrifices in our behalf, have preserved our ideals and helped secure our lives and liberty. Our gratitude to them calls for a renewal of our spirit of American patriotism on Veterans Day. It calls for an ALERT America. This is the spirit of '76, the spirit of 1861, of 1918 and 1942, and so magnificently demonstrated by the spirit of our fighting forces in Vietnam.

As we ponder on the words of our late President Kennedy, "Ask what you can do for your country," we should respond with a rededication to a vigorous and unashamed patriotism. As a renewal of our "Pledge of Allegiance" let all Elks fly the American flag high on Veterans Day in tribute to all those who have served their country so devotedly. Fly the flag high as a symbol of our faith in the American way of freedom and our determination to preserve this freedom against all enemies at home or abroad.

R. Leonard Bush, Grand Exalted Ruler of the Order of Elks, places a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery at ceremonies arranged by Exalted Ruler Henry H. Dembo of Washington, D. C., Lodge.

In the Virginias

GRAND EXALTED RULER and Mrs. R. Leonard Bush were welcomed warmly by Past Grand Exalted Ruler John L. Walker, Grand Lodge Americanism Committeeman Lawrence H. Hoover, former Grand Inner Guard Charles D. Fox, Jr., and hundreds of other Virginia Elks to their 56th Annual Convention at Fredericksburg August 14-17.

Introduced by Mr. Walker, the Order's new leader was a most informative speaker at this meeting when delegates learned that their Major Project, the Elks Boys' Camp, Inc., had sponsored 471 deserving boys for a two-week vacation this year, spending over $30,000. They authorized $12,000 for improvements during the coming months.

Roanoke Lodge won the Ritualistic Contest, with Arlington-Fairfax in second place, followed by Norfolk, Richmond and Winchester, in that order. All committees submitted excellent reports, and several scholarship and Youth Leadership winners were on hand to accept their awards. Virginia showed a net gain in membership of 478, and increased its charitable expenditures measurably over other years. These Elks are planning to double their contributions to the Elks National Foundation during the coming year.

Superintendent Doral Irvin of the Elks National Home spoke on this fine facility, ten of whose residents were on hand for the Convention, for the first time in the Home's history.

Norfolk will be host to the 1966 Meeting in August, and this month a Fall Session is taking place at Petersburg. Officials for the current term are President B. M. Scott, Suffolk; Vice-Presidents Cecil G. May, Clifton Forge, Owen D. Simmons, Jr., Harrisonburg, and Benjamin L. Campbell, Petersburg;

Secretary Charles F. Curtice, Petersburg; Treasurer Cecil T. Duffee, Norfolk; Chaplain Sidney Sullivan, Fredericksburg; Sergeant-at-Arms Perry E. Turner, Suffolk, and Tiler R. L. Pannell, Clifton Forge. Retiring President L. H. Biscoe of Fredericksburg was elected to a three-year term as Trustee.

WITH 558 ELKS registered, 23 of the 24 lodges in the State represented, and 16 of the Association's 27 living Past Presidents on hand, the August 18-21 Annual Convention of the West Virginia Elks Association at Wheeling was a great success.

Grand Exalted Ruler R. Leonard Bush was guest of honor, along with Grand Secretary Franklin J. Fitzpatrick, who were joined by Past Grand Exalted Ruler Wade H. Kepner and Grand Esteemed Leading Knight Dewey E. S. Kuhns, both of West Virginia.

The Crippled Children's Camps, the Association's Major Project, had a larger attendance this year than ever before, operated at a cost of $6,000. The group's four Veterans Service Committees continue to do excellent work, as do all others, notably the Crippled Children's Committee whose report was dramatized by the showing of a color movie covering the activities at all three camps.

The Grand Exalted Ruler was the principal speaker at this conclave, and the Grand Secretary conducted a Secretaries' Clinic which was very well attended.

In office until the 1966 Convention in Clarksburg are President William T. Perri, Clarksburg; Vice-Presidents A. S. Ammar, Logan, Timothy Murphy, Wheeling, and Edward C. Noll, Martinsburg; Secretary Garnett W. Shipley, Martinsburg; Treasurer Ralph C. Adams, Huntington; Sergeant-at-Arms Ralph H. Barnes, Wellsburg; Chaplain William C. Houchins, Princeton; Inner Guard J. A. Case, Sistersville; Tiler W. F. Keller, Wheeling, and Trustees R. Wayne West, Moundsville, Ray Malone, Wellsburg, Miles L. Cobun, Morgantown, and Frank F. Martin, Huntington.

ELKS MEMORIAL SUNDAY

The time-honored Elks Memorial Sunday Services will be held throughout the Order on Sunday, December 5, to honor the memory of our "Absent Brothers."

Awards will be made again by the Grand Lodge Committee on Lodge Activities to lodges in each of four membership groups whose programs are judged as the most fitting.

Be sure your lodge's tribute to its departed members is worthy of their memory and of Elk tradition, and that your brochure covering these Services is submitted for judging no later than December 26 to

Adding YEARS to Your Smile

If you have to wear dentures—and one out of every two must by age 50—don't despair. Modern prosthetic science can assure reasonable comfort and give you a winning, natural appearance

By LOUIS B. KUHN

IT WAS an unusual complaint, all right. Most women would have been ecstatic, but this lady was actually disappointed.

"I got my new dentures Friday, and when I went to work Monday morning no one even noticed my new teeth," she lamented.

Her disappointment, voiced on a radio program for all the world to hear, seems ridiculous, but it serves to illustrate an important accomplishment of modern dentistry. No one noticed that she was wearing dentures because today's techniques and appliances make it difficult—often impossible—to tell the artificial from the real thing. It's almost a case of "does she or doesn't she? Only her dentist knows for sure."

Maintaining a pleasant, natural appearance is by no means the only purpose of a denture. Nature had a very good reason for giving us 32 teeth. They all work to prepare our food for digestion and help us speak clearly, as well as face the world with a winning smile. The person who has the misfortune to lose his natural teeth needs dentures to replace his lost chewing efficiency and speaking ability, and those dentures must fit properly or they may endanger his health—and even his life.

The fact is that one of every two persons in the United States today needs either partial or complete dentures by age 50. Because the situation isn't likely to improve for some years to come, it's a good idea to prepare for the possibility of living with artificial teeth.

Many prosthodontists—dentists who specialize in replacing missing teeth—advise that you have a plaster of paris cast made of your natural teeth. Have it done after you are 21 years of age, when the permanent teeth are mature, but before age 30 because after that age teeth may shift or "migrate" and the original pattern is lost.

"Just put the cast in a box with your other souvenirs and put it away," says Dr. Cecil Bliss of Sioux City, Iowa. "Some day it may prove valuable as a guide to the dentist who wants to make your artificial teeth look as if you grew them yourself."

A sure way to look and feel older than you are is to put off replacing missing teeth with artificial ones (not "false teeth"). Dr. Victor L. Steffel, professor in the Department of Prosthodontics, Ohio State University College of Dentistry, will take issue with anyone who says "false teeth."

An old joke with dentists is "be true to your teeth or they'll be false to you." But Dr. Steffel says, "You can wear a false face at Halloween. It's something you put over your own face. You can wear false teeth as a disguise. But when you replace teeth that have been lost or extracted, the new ones are artificial teeth and function as if they were your own."

Even your wife need not know that you are wearing artificial teeth. We know a man who got away with it, thanks to his dentist. In a letter to a health columnist of the Miami Herald, a 31-year-old dental patient said, "The only person who has seen me without my teeth is my dentist. My wife has never seen me without them, and my eight-year-old son doesn't know I have them. The day the old ones were taken out the new ones were ready and in place in 10 minutes."

These are called "immediate" dentures because within minutes after teeth have been extracted artificial teeth are put into replacement position. Dr. Alfred E. Seyler of Detroit, educator and dental columnist, says, "Usually it is better to have dentures inserted immediately. This means that the upper or lower dentures, or both, must be completed before the natural teeth are removed. If the patient wants to have his artificial teeth look like his own, the dentist can copy them closely as far as color, shape, or position are concerned." He says that while patients usually want their artificial teeth to look better than the ones they are losing, it's a good rule to make some improvement but keep the general appearance of the natural teeth.

Women are particularly vocal on the subject of dentures, especially for the opposite sex. One prominent prosthodontist feels that consultation with your wife or mother-in-law during the "try-in" session for new dentures can be helpful to you and your dentist.

Dr. Max Pleasure of Bronx, New York, makes the point that sometimes a patient who "is too willing to defer to our superior knowledge and judgment" may return to the dental office full of unhappy complaints after the dentures are finished, because of some casual disparagement by wife or mother-in-law. He suggests it may be wise to invite consultation and comment by the wife, close relative, or even a friend when the dentures are fitted.

A contrary point of view is expressed by Dr. Frank A. Farrell of Chicago, president of the American Prosthodontic Society. "The last person in the

And now while there's time-out on the field here at University Stadium, we'll give you some half-time scores of major games. Michigan leads Purdue, seven to nothing; Notre Dame is trouncing Wisconsin, twenty-one to nothing; Missouri and Nebraska are at a zero-zero standstill. In the East, Penn State and Maryland are tied at seven all; and Slippery Rock is edging Shippensburg State College by a score of seven to six....

The Slippery Rock Story By LOU PRATO

Football fans all over the country are watching and listening breathlessly each week for the score of this, their favorite college team—although some aren't absolutely sure it exists

IT HAS BEEN SAID that the weirdest sports phenomenon of our times is the mystical but affectionate adulation bestowed by New York baseball fans on a rather inept professional team known as the Mets.

But this just isn't so.

For, despite all the hoopla over the bumbling Mets, nothing can quite compare with the equally esoteric but far more widespread and charming appeal of a small college football team from the Allegheny Mountain foothills of western Pennsylvania.

The team? Slippery Rock, of course! Yes, there really is a Slippery Rock.

No sports team in the world can boast of a following like Slippery Rock's. Just uttering the name brings ecstasy to countless romantics from Litcher, La., to Pamplona, Spain. They root for her, pray for her, cheer for her, and cry for her. They may not even believe in her, but they love her faithfully, nonetheless.

Every autumn Saturday afternoon, Slippery Rock sends its robust young men onto the field for battle, and its legion of fans wait anxiously for the outcome to be flashed around the world.

At the University of Washington stadium in Seattle, and at similar sites from Norman, Okla., to Ann Arbor, Mich., near pandemonium erupts whenever the Slippery Rock score is given.

In newspaper offices and radio stations from coast to coast, switchboards are jammed by persistent callers seeking the latest Slippery Rock result.

And woe unto the newspaper that fails to print the score in the Sunday papers, or the radio station that leaves Slippery Rock off its football roundups.

"On the occasions when we've forgotten to include the Slippery Rock score in our football roundup," reports Ted McCoy of radio station KVBC in Great Bend, Kan., "we get more telephone calls than we have when we forget the Kansas University score."

Last year when a Fort Benning, Ga., soldier named Cecil Pollack could not find the result of Slippery Rock's game with Indiana (Pa.) State, he sought the assistance of college officials.

"It seems that the score of the game was not given in the paper or over the radio, and it is about to drive me out of my mind," he wrote. "I've been trying to find out the score all week. Please drop me a card and let me know what happened."

That's the way it is for millions of Slippery Rock followers all over the world. They may simply be high school girls like Nancy and Betty Rogers of La Place, La. Or defense workers, like the 550 RCA personnel at the Ballistic Missile Early Warning System facility in Clear, Alaska. Or department store customers, such as the ones at Freeland's in Florence, S. C., and Ford's in Bay City, Mich. Or just an ordinary soul like Mrs. Betty Fraiser of Indianola, Miss., the Sunflower County tax assessor.

Only a handful are actual alumni of the school, and most have never been near the 410-acre campus 50 miles north of Pittsburgh. Until a few years ago, most of them didn't even believe the school existed but thought it was really a bit of chicanery perpetrated and perpetuated by some imaginative sportswriters and sportscasters. School officials still distribute a pennant that says: "Yes, there is a Slippery Rock."

But today, most of the Slippery Rock aficionados know there is a school (and a team) with that name. Yet, they adore and cherish Slippery Rock with more gusto than ever.

Take the Slippery Rock cult in Houston, for instance. A formal boosters club has been organized under the direction of a local advertising man named Pat Daniels. Club members meet several times during the football season to toast the success of their beloved team, and each year they march in the city's St. Patrick's Day parade, attired in Slippery Rock's green and white sweatshirts and waving large pennants.

The club also publishes a newsletter called The Slippery Rock Skidder and boasts branch chapters in such places as Pascagoula-Moss Pt., Miss.; Reynosa, Mexico; Dublin, Ireland; and Paris.

Another group of rabid Slippery Rock rooters is in Seattle, where school T-shirts and pennants are sold at each of the University of Washington home games. Radio station KETO periodically runs public service announcements extolling the virtues of State of Washington universities, and then adds quite enthusiastically: ". . . but if you are interested in pursuing your education out of state, have you given any thought to Slippery Rock?"

When Slippery Rock played Northeastern Oklahoma State in the post-season All-Sports Bowl in Oklahoma City two years ago, the station carried the game live back to Seattle. (This wasn't the first time for such a Slippery Rock broadcast. Several years ago, station WGST in Atlanta, Ga., carried a Slippery Rock game with Muskingum of Ohio.)

In April of 1964 when the State of Washington celebrated its 75th anniversary of statehood—which coincided with the 75th anniversary of Slippery Rock's founding—emissaries of the governor traveled to the Slippery Rock campus bearing such gifts as a 25-pound salmon from Puget Sound.

Southern California's Slippery Rock sect is second to none. In Pasadena on New Year's Day of 1964, two 13-year-old boys from a Los Angeles suburb set up a stand outside of the Rose Bowl with the intention of selling some 300 Slippery Rock pennants to earn money for college. The cops chased them for not having a license before they could sell a dozen pennants. Local television personality Bill Welsh heard about the incident and put the boys on TV. Within days, the rest of the pennants were sold.

Last November, the Southern Californians even got to see their revered team in action when Slippery Rock played Los Angeles State—then the nation's top-ranked small college team—in the Rose Bowl. A large welcoming caravan, including a brass band, a bevy of coed escorts, and an 89-year-old Slippery Rock alumna (class of '98) greeted the team at the Los Angeles International Airport. Residents of suburban Alhambra took the players and coaches into their homes on Thanksgiving Day, and Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty, giving them the key to the city, proclaimed the day of the game as "Slippery Rock Day."

Several thousand ebullient fans—many lugging signs bearing such phrases as "Don't Knock the Rock"—turned out to cheer for Slippery Rock. Included were several hundred employees of the Atlantic Research Corp., a maker of rockets (the Slippery Rock team nickname), who performed card stunts at halftime and led Slippery Rock cheers: "Slippery, Slippery, Slippery Rockets, You've Got LA in Your Pockets."

Unfortunately, LA State had Slippery Rock in its pockets. Final score: Slippery Rock 6, LA State 62.

Nee, of Clearwater, Fla., Lodge's Americanism Committee and Co-Chairman of the Fla. West Central District Americanism Committee. Later, Clearwater's Mayor Joe Turner appointed local Elk Hans F. Gompertz an Ambassador of Good Will for the city on his departure for a two-month tour of South American countries. While in Lima, Mr. Gompertz is meeting with officials there in connection with Clearwater Lodge's OPERATION PEN PAL PERU, a successful letter-writing program sponsored by the Elks between high school children of both cities. Similar projects are being conducted by the lodge between the students of John F. Kennedy Junior High School in Clearwater and those of the American Institute at La Paz, Bolivia, and between the Oak Grove Junior High scholars and young people studying at the American Colegio at Quito, Ecuador.

More Lodge Notes

When Paramount, Calif., Lodge celebrated Mother's Day this year, three bouquets of flowers were presented—one to the oldest mother present, another to the mother of the most children, and the third to the grandmother having the most grandchildren. All three were won by Mrs. Donna Sims, mother-in-law of Elk Red Fudge. At 83 years of age, Mrs. Sims has 16 children, 67 grandchildren, 83 great-grandchildren and nine great-great-grandchildren. That adds up to 175, which makes a mighty big family. The bouquet for the youngest mother present went to Mrs. Janet Teague, Red's daughter-in-law, keeping all the flowers in what must certainly be one of California's small villages in itself.

More than 3,000 members of Grand Forks, N. D., Lodge, their wives and children enjoyed the Elks' annual picnic this year. About 100 members appointed by Exalted Ruler Dale Churchill pitched in to handle the serving of food, and the operation of a dunking machine, with Chairman Kenneth Holt taking the first dive into the tank. Entertainment, races and a lively concert by the Elks Band, led by W. E. Pond, rounded out a full day of activity.

Brick, N. J., Lodge entertained children from St. Edmund's Home for Crippled Children on their annual outing at Turtle Back Park. Members of the lodge's Crippled Children's Committee, with Chairman Walter Holtgren, Exalted Ruler Anthony Niedzwiecki, and a number of the Elks' ladies, together with attending Sisters and Seminars, accompanied the youngsters on the bus trip, helping to make their day a happy memory.

Elks Night at Buffalo Raceway saw Go Joe, driven by Vince Aquino, win the feature race. Past District Deputy John Kagabein, Exalted Ruler Jack Foster of Hamburg, N. Y., Lodge, and Past Exalted Ruler William Bitterman who Chairmanned the outing, joined the

For any interested readers—the USS West Virginia BB (48) will hold its 11th annual reunion December 4 at the VFW Hall in Gardena, Calif. For information, write R. A. Brown, VFW Hall, 1822 W. 162nd St., Gardena. Also, preliminary arrangements for the first annual reunion of the USS New Orleans, to be held next summer, are now being made. For details, and information, contact S. F. Wallace, P. O. Box 990, Kingsville, Texas.

Webster, Mass., Lodge reports on a number of activities. About 30 Elk daughters enjoyed a picnic early in the summer, and the lodge's annual picnic in August was a howling success. Some weeks later, Felix Woznicki, the lodge Organist for more than 20 years, was honored at a chicken dinner.

Mrs. James Emerson and Mrs. Francis Donaldson, representing the ladies of Niagara Falls, N. Y., Lodge, presented the Gene Lunken Memorial Plaque to Past Exalted Ruler Patrick Flanagan not long ago. The plaque had been awarded to the ladies of Niagara Falls Lodge by the Parent Education Group of the Association for Mentally Retarded Children in recognition of their efforts in raising $9,500 over an eight-year period for the Children's Day Camp.

Pasadena, Calif., Lodge's Boy Scout Troop celebrated its 50th anniversary of continuous service with a Court of Honor at the lodge home. Kenneth A. Gordon, the Troop's first Scoutmaster, participated in the ceremonies raising four of the Troop to the rank of Eagle Scout. They are Kenneth Knutson, Richard Ahlgren, and Kenneth and Lloyd Newell. Other participants in this ceremony were Exalted Ruler Robert Winton and current Scoutmaster Robert Schropfel.

The Elks National Home members were hosts to the National Ritualistic Champions, from Kingsport, Tenn., Lodge early in September. Correct in anticipating a capacity crowd, (there were 300 guests) Supt. Doral E. Irvin had the Home's large dining room set up as a lodge room, making it more comfortable for the large number of visitors from all over Virginia who attended. Among the guests were Past Grand Exalted Ruler John L. Walker and Chairman Edward W. McCabe of the Board of Grand Trustees.

At a regular Rapid City, S. D., Elk meeting, with Exalted Ruler Ed Belmore presiding, Exalted Ruler Merle Caudle and six of his fellow officers were guests, conducting the initiation ceremony for 11 candidates. Athletic Committee Chairman Ed Hajek reported on an Omaha, Neb., Meeting when Rapid City was chosen as the site of the next Elks Invitational Bowling Tournament. State Americanism Chairman Lew Keehn was an interesting speaker on patriotism, and what Elks can do to promote Americanism in their communities.

Seven members of the Order, and three of our lodges have been cited by the National Recreation Association for outstanding service to recreation in local communities. Two New York lodges, Freeport and Long Beach, and Rock Hill, S. C., Lodge were honored. Individual Elks receiving the tribute are James H. Radler of Lehigh, Pa.; Paul F. Brogan of Auburn, Maine; Edmund H. Hanlon of Red Bank, N. J.; Carroll M. Wymer of Ironton, Ohio; Omer Tucker of Farmington, N. M.; Donald L. Burnett of Pocatello, Idaho, and Martin C. Warberg of Caldwell, Idaho. The awards were made in conjunction with the nationwide observance of June as National Recreation Month, sponsored by NRA which has been encouraging new and creative use of the leisure hours of all Americans for more than half a century.

WRITES FROM WASHINGTON

CALIFORNIA is our most populous state, according to latest Census Bureau estimates, with some 18,602,000 souls. New York is second with 18,073,000. California's lead is expected to stretch to a million by the time the 1970 census is taken. The District of Columbia now has an estimated population of 803,000, up 39,000 since the 1960 census.

WEARY TOURISTS, in line for touring the White House, no longer have to stand for half an hour or more outside the gates. The First Lady is not only seeking to make Washington more beautiful but more comfortable as well, in this case with benches along the sidewalk.

STRANGE STREET SIGNS cause double takes by visiting motorists. There's a "4½ Street," and another reads "Half and O Street." Lettered streets are posted accordingly, except for "I" Street. It becomes "Eye Street."

MIDTOWN MARINA: The new $100 million Rayburn House Office Building has four small boats belonging to Congressmen in its tri-level garage, now that summer is over. The spaces (which nicked the taxpayers some $7,500 each) can be used by Representatives as they see fit, so no one's complaining. There are a couple of camper trailers stored as well. A total of 1,680 parking spaces are available there for Congressmen and their staffs.

SANDWICH COINS—the new ones made with layers of copper and other metals—will be profitable to Uncle Sam. The saving in silver will amount to several hundred million dollars next year. It costs about two cents to produce and distribute the new 25-cent piece.

G.I. LOAN SHARKS are under fire from the Defense Dept. Deputy Secretary Cyrus Vance ordered each military installation in the nation to provide free accommodations to a credit union that will operate with "reasonable rates of interest." Congressional hearings revealed some servicemen have paid loan sharks as much as 50 percent annual interest on short-term notes.

FARES FOR FLYING may come down, if the Civil Aeronautics Board has its way. It argues that many airlines are now making good profits, and that lower fares will encourage more air travel. Recent surveys show that 62 percent of the American people have yet to leave the ground in a plane.

WASHINGTON'S SUBWAY will start service by 1971, boasting 25 miles of track. The National Capitol Transportation Agency has $431 million to spend, and estimates that by 1980 184 air-conditioned cars will be traveling 31,000 miles a day. Rush-hour service will be every two minutes. As an example of the valuable speed to be offered, a ride from the Capitol to downtown Connecticut Avenue and K Street will take only five minutes.

LB'S OFFICIAL PORTRAIT will be painted by Peter Hurd, a noted Western artist. He does much of his work at his ranch at San Patricio, N. Mex.

DAUGHTERS of the American Revolution object to a new way of displaying the Stars and Stripes—on a girdle. It's not the U.S. flag, exactly, but the three-way stretch garment put on the market recently had white stars on a blue field around the waist and vertical red and white stripes below. It was too close for the DAR, whose Flag Committee protested that it wasn't a proper way for a lady to display (or should we say conceal?) her patriotism. The girdle's name, "Stars 'n Stripes," was also deemed improper. The manufacturer agreed; the DAR has won another sort of a Battle of the Bulge.

APPLE PICKING at $1.25 per hour was offered unemployed men and women in Virginia and West Virginia by the Department of Labor, but only a few responded to the call. The $45 million crop should have had 2,500 pickers. It was saved when all available hands—including 300 foreign laborers, recruited by growers with the Department's permission—were asked to help.

TELEPHONE CABLE, 55 million feet of it, has been discovered in Army storehouses at Fort Monmouth, N. J. It cost $5 million; sold as scrap copper it may bring about $450,000.

NOVEMBER NOODLES . . . Washington outperformed 16 other major cities last summer in reducing pedestrian deaths as the result of an intensive anti-jaywalking campaign by police. . . . Employment here has been well over the million mark for the past several months. . . . A widow complained to the District Undertakers Examining Committee that a funeral home asked for the job of burying her husband before she even knew he was dead. . . . Interior Secretary Udall says Warren J. Wisby of the University of Miami will be director of the $10 million National Aquarium to be built in East Potomac Park by 1968. . . . Representative Albert Quie of Minnesota pronounces his name "kwee"; Senator Birch Bayh of Indiana answers to "bye." Bye now.

Unfortunate Omission

I think your coverage of the July Convention (September issue) was good. I do not want to appear to be critical, but I am concerned about the inclusion, as far as I can tell, of all Committee Chairmen by pictures except Joe McArthur, Chairman of the Americanism Committee. . . . He gives all of his time to the work of Elksdom. I wish we had just a few more like him. . . .

WILLIAM S. HAWKINS, P.G.E.R.
Coeur d'Alene, Idaho

Our apologies to Brother McArthur. His photo was to appear with the other Committee Chairmen, but something went awry. We did not see proofs of all photos taken until our return to New York, and at that time—too late—we found that the one of Joe McArthur was missing. The camera may have "misfired." We are well aware of the splendid job Brother McArthur has been doing for the Order and regret the disappointment that must have been felt by his many friends. For all readers, we publish here a photograph of Chairman McArthur, taken on a different occasion. —The Editors

Tale of the SOUTH PACIFIC: PART I

By JERRY HULSE

In the first installment of this two-part adventure, our wandering correspondent chats about some of those islands of enchantment that are currently coping with the phenomenon called "progress"

RAIN FELL in a veil on the airport at Honolulu one recent muggy midnight. It turned the runway into a slickened mirror. Airport lights caught in the reflection passed drunkenly as our Pan Am jet rushed forward into the tropical night, disappearing among the clouds on a course set for Samoa. In the not-so-long-ago, such a trip would have taken days. On this recent night, though, the days were reduced to mere hours—4½ hours to be exact—as 2,500 miles of sky and sea disappeared in the wake of the Clipper flight to Pago Pago. So it is that civilization has reached paradise on the wings of a jet.

Goodbye, Sadie Thompson.

The sound of the jackhammer is heard across Rainmaker Bay; it echoes back from the pinnacles of Rainmaker Mountain, the unmistakable and inevitable call of an emerging "civilization." Soon now, Mary Pritchard's ramshackle, 15-room Rainmaker Inn will slam shut forever its doors on an era that filled the minds of men with peaceful dreams of this South Seas outpost and their hearts with the melancholy memory of Somerset Maugham's sweet bad girl, Miss Sadie Thompson.

Already, steaming black asphalt is settling the dusty roads. Power plants are on the rise. Modern sewage systems are being installed—and the Samoan small fry are being educated by piped-in TV. Only recently the new $5 million Tafuna Airport was dedicated. And now Samoa is looking to the opening (possibly next month) of a modern new hotel, the Pago Pago Intercontinental.

Guests will snooze in the luxury of

The South Seas: a lush, tropical paradise—but changing rapidly.

100 air-conditioned, thatched rooms. They'll paddle about in a modern swimming pool—and they'll soak up the sun's rays on a private golden beach. The scene resembles a Hollywood version of a Samoan village more than it does a hotel. There's even a South Seas-like bar, the sort of place you expect to find in Mr. Hilton's glitteramas.

Until the Pago Pago Intercontinental opens, tourists are still being bedded down in the wobbly Rainmaker Inn—a clapboard cottage with tin roof and noisy bedsprings. When the 15 rooms overflow, makeshift accommodations are created with the installation of portable dressing screens, out in the hallways. Three meals and a bunk (left behind by the Navy nurses of World War II) comes to $12 a day.

Down in town at Pritchard's General Store, Dior perfumes are stacked alongside Granny Goose potato chips. And nearby, bless her memory, is Sadie Thompson's old place. The locals swear she was real. On Friday and Saturday nights they gather at the Island Moon, a South Seas pub with electric fan spinning overhead and a poster from the Osaka Cement Co. tacked to a wall. Beer is poured at two bits a glass. And by the door these words are scrawled in chalk: "Dine and dance tonight and have fun to enjoy the magnificent floor show specially arranged and well-prepared."

So goes life in American Samoa. For Polynesia undisturbed, though, one must make the 45-minute leap by Polynesian Airlines DC-3 to Apia in Western Samoa. Here maidens with the smiles of carefree abandon stroll with golden flowers perfuming their silken black hair. Laundry is strung between breadfruit trees. Coconuts and papayas hang in fat clusters.

In a seaside village at the foot of Mt. Fao, naked children and chickens and pigs run free. No one bothers to tend a garden; the gardens grow naturally everywhere. There is no hunger in Samoa for the life is sustained by the trees and the incredible green sea. In Apia, a town along the coast, tourists are bid welcome at Aggie Grey's. Shelter and meals come to $8 a day. Aggie herself will match you for beers and tell you tales of the South Pacific, of how she built her hotel in World War II when she saw our Seabees sleeping in the rain. Some say she's the real Bloody Mary. She denies this, but still—I wonder?

With that question unresolved, we flapped on to Tonga on the morning flight of Polynesian Air Lines' pride and joy, the vintage DC-3. Before touchdown, four hours later, we flew above the smoldering island of Tofua, the earth still convulsing below it. It was here that Captain Bligh sought refuge in 1789 following the mutiny. Our landing in Tonga was nothing less than magnificent, considering the field—a grass runway shaved from a coconut grove. We claimed our baggage in a terminal building not quite the size of a hot dog stand and later faced the customs cops next door in a rusting gunset hut.

Tonga, like everywhere else in the South Pacific, is looking for tourists. As a result, a new hotel's rising and the bite, we're told, will be $9 single and $11.25 double, breakfast included. Until then, Beach House—a tumbledown inn—will continue to feed and shelter boarders at $7.50 a day. Tea's included both morning and afternoon.

The reigning monarch of this poker-chip-size paradise is Tonga's good Queen Salote. Her Royal Highness rattles through her coconut kingdom in a Cadillac limousine while her son, Prince Tungī, putters about the island in a Checker cab. He chose a Checker because of his own hugeness; the doors open wide.

Why stop in Tonga? Well, it's a friendly place. The islanders are by nature so pleasant that Captain Cook tagged Tonga the "Friendly Islands" when he came calling in 1776. Before departing he presented a pet tortoise to the reigning monarch. It's still alive and still crawls across the royal grounds—filmed by tourists, revered by Tongans, and protected by the queen herself.

After filming the turtle and ogling the royal grounds, we flew on to Fiji. It was a leisurely afternoon flap away, again by twin-prop plane. Now that the natives have stopped filling their pots with missionaries, tourism to Fiji is reaching the boiling point. Last year 40,000 visitors came calling.

Americans must dip south and slightly west more than 5,600 miles from the U.S. mainland, a trip flown regularly by Pan Am. With a modern airport at Nadi, the island chain has become the airline hub of the South Seas—even though the new terminal building looks more South Bend than South Seas.

Crowding the scene are 500 islands scattered across 250,000 square miles of peaceful Pacific, islands ranging from towering mountains to tiny atolls. The big island of Viti Levu takes the jets, and incidentally harvests the bulk of the tourists. Rising from the palm trees is a resort called Korolevu, a scattering of thatched huts about two hours from Nadi.

Guests sleep in an American-style main building or Fijian-style in the thatched bungalows. Now-friendly natives make like the ferocious cannibals of yore on Saturday nights, dancing the meke wesi, a sort of cross between the twist and the frug, only it's done with a spear in place of a partner.

Down Queen's Road a luxury inn is being blueprinted for Yanuca Island, a $1 million village that'll contain 100 rooms with thatched toppers. At low tide guests will wade back and forth to the island, which comes blessed with one of those picture-postcard white sand beaches.

For the tourist who insists on spending time in Nadi (and I can't imagine why) the tab at a couple of comfortable inns, the Skylodge and Mocambo, comes to $9 single and $14 double per day. Rising at Suva is the old Grand Pacific, a very proper pile with high ceilings and British ornamentation. In Suva, sari-clad Indian maidens stroll with bearded Sikhs, and a new skyscraper arches into the flawless heavens—all of five stories tall.

Crouching barely west of the international dateline, Fiji is where it's always yesterday everywhere to the east. It is also where the earliest paper is published as each new day rolls around, the Fiji Times & Herald. In addition, Suva is the starting point for boat trips up the Rewa and Wainibokasi Rivers to the village of Nasilai. At the Nasilai Tropicana, visitors swim in a secluded lagoon, cast for fish, or else snooze in thatched bures—a 24-hour excursion priced at $15 a night. Native feasting and tribal dancing are included. The management gives fair warning, though, that "except for the luxury of a comfortable bed and electric light (providing the generator behaves) there are few of the comforts of a modern hotel."

We chose instead to go cruising with Captain Dick Smith on his luxury yacht Stardust. The tab for three days through the Mamanutha Islands comes to $18 to $28 a day—cabin, meals, morning and afternoon tea, trolling, water-skiing, spearfishing, and island exploring. On the uninhabited and golden island of Galito, where we put ashore, Smith intends to establish a 100-room native-style resort. Space on the cruiser Stardust can be reserved by writing to Smith at P.O. Box 269, Lautoka, Fiji.

When evening comes, the Stardust lies at anchor in some quiet cove. The sun falls and the sky flames. Only the waves washing against a faraway reef disturb the silence. The peacefulness is delicious.

Next month we'll continue our island hopping, with stops at Tahiti, Mooréa, Raiatéa, and Bora Bora for another look at the bouillabaisse resulting when "progress" comes to paradise. ● ●

A New Dawn

efficiency that results from our present neglect of this group, many of whom grow up unable to work and contribute because of the lack of training and preparation for employment. Education for the average child and education for the retarded child are both parts of national preparedness, today and always."

What is mental retardation? How does this dark enemy choose its victims, cutting as it does across every conceivable line of wealth, prestige, educational background, environment, race, creed, and color? Have we made any progress at all on the scientific front by applying the military adage of seeking out the enemy to destroy him? Is the campaign against MR an exclusively high-level war under direction of tax-supported agencies and well-heeled philanthropic groups (such as the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation, named in memory of the late President's brother who was killed in World War II), or can anybody join up? How and why should we join up?

You could say that mental retardation is a telephone call at 5 A.M. to tell you your newborn son is a mongoloid, and will probably be retarded. That's how it happened to this reporter. Why the doctor felt he had to do it that way, after having called at 3:00 to say all was well with our sixth child and his mother, I'll never know. Perhaps he took a closer look and was rattled. It could happen to anybody.

Against the advice of consulting specialists, we brought our son home to see if love and care might not give him the chance to develop which, instinctively, we felt no institution could provide. Time—and the warm, unstinting devotion of his brothers and sisters—have proved us right. He's coming along famously in both speech and behavior, now goes to a special school, should one day be able to earn his way modestly as a willing, conscientious, naturally cheerful worker.

There's another side to it, though: In awakening us to deep compassion for all afflicted people, he has, God knows, done far more for us than we could ever do for him.

Time has also shifted medical opinion in general away from institutionalizing as the best means of helping the great majority of the retarded. This shift took 3,000 years or 50 years, depending on how you look at it, and might not yet have begun if John F. Kennedy had not had his way. For except where religiously inclined civilizations looked on the mentally afflicted as having been "touched by the finger of God," the retarded have down the centuries been treated as animals or, worse, as if they were indistinguishable from the mentally ill, the criminal-ly insane, the degenerate.

For the perpetuation of this cruel misconception in the United States, one school of thought bears heavy responsibility. The reason nobody even thought about training the retarded to hold jobs until recently was that they figured no retarded person could hope to absorb much education. The reason they entertained that completely baseless notion was that people who should have known better had assured them, as far back as 1916, that the retarded were locked at the low level of intellectual capability they were born with, that it was fixed forever.

Many educational authorities of the recent past, having laid the foundation for applying to schoolchildren the Stanford-Binet I.Q. test we set such store by today, went so far as to say that

HOW DARE RADATRON
INVENT THIS
RADAR DETECTOR

TO SIGNAL
DRIVERS OF RADAR ZONES

HERE'S WHY!

Every conscientious law abiding citizen does not deliberately desire to speed in their high powered, easy rolling autos. Sometimes it happens unconsciously! With Radar Sentry, a driver, upon entering his auto, is reminded to watch his speed. Users agree they drive more carefully and happily.

Radar Sentry alerts a driver of a controlled radar speed zone far in advance of the critical clocked area. As the radar beam is picked up, the Radar Sentry sounds a steady beep reminding the driver to slow down and stay within safe speed limits. Radar Sentry increases driver attention!

Miniature magnesium case 3 1/2" W x 2 3/4" D x 2 1/4" H. clips on sun visor—no wires—completely transistorized—approved in many states for safe driving.

"Butter them up—maybe we can freeload again next year."

while the retarded could make a little progress in a well-managed special class, no later than at the onset of adolescence they should be taken into custodial care by the state "for its own protection." Perhaps it was understandable for them to contend that the retarded couldn't learn much; this fitted the then-governing view that the I.Q. is unchangeable—although we know today that such is not the case at all. Today we know that I.Q.'s among the retarded can be increased as much as 30 percent, as Dr. O. K. Moore of the Responsive Environments Foundation and other educational research scientists have amply demonstrated. (For the average retarded child, an intellectually stimulating environment—pictures, games, music, talk, singing—during his first two or three years of life can improve his I.Q. by 10 or 20 percent; lack of such stimuli at that critical time can, conversely, impel him toward the status of a vegetable.)

On the other hand, it is difficult to understand how and why certain behavioral scientists of that era should have jumped to the conclusion that the mentally retarded are also, necessarily, morally retarded—that if we don't lock them up they may, without provocation, physically assault those around them and in other ways prove socially unacceptable. In the light of today's knowledge, it is most charitable perhaps to view this as a tragic by-product—one much too much with us still—of some of the pioneer work done by psychologists in the study of intelligence.

Dr. Gunnar Dybwad, former executive director of the National Association for Retarded Children, a non-profit, nationwide group with 1,000 local chapters which sponsors MR research and education programs, summarily rejects such ideas as having seriously impeded progress for millions of intellectually disadvantaged Americans. So does the medical profession as a whole. Now at last, laymen too are abandoning what President Kennedy scored as "prejudice, superstition, and ignorance" about the retarded, and are joining in the rewarding struggle to give these fellow citizens the fair shake they deserve.

"The way we treat the individual considered to be mentally retarded will have a definite effect on his development," says Dr. Dybwad. "If our concept of mental retardation is static; if we think these individuals are incurable; if we treat them as though they are also morally deficient, in addition; then we can predict, with a high degree of reliability, that their functioning will definitely be limited and their ability to deal with moral problems will certainly be deficient.

"However, if we expect a great deal more of them, and consequently provide the training, the opportunities, and the encouragement by which our expectations can be realized, then there is a good possibility that these individuals will function at a much higher level than had ever been anticipated in the past."

Dr. Dybwad's formula for helping the retarded to get more mileage out of the equipment nature gave them is fourfold: (1) Recognize that each person is different, with his own pattern of skills and weaknesses; (2) work with him as he tries to build on his skills; (3) encourage him in his efforts to strengthen his areas of weakness; and (4) never lose sight of the need for a different approach with each individual.

On the scientific as well as on the social frontier, similar understanding and insight are necessary if we are ever going to stop MR in its tracks and ease with steadily increasing success its inroads on people already among us. Today at last, in laboratories across the nation, a full-scale campaign has been mounted to accomplish all this. It is a formidable challenge the scientists in these laboratories face, one which will take a lot of time, money, and patience to come to grips with, but also one which, as Vice-President Humphrey says, "will pay off in billions of dollars saved from turning taxpayers into self-respecting taxpayers, and from utilizing at its highest potential, rather than at its lowest, a vast untapped pool of manpower.

"There is another payoff, of course," he adds, "one which any American worth his salt will immediately prefer above all else. I'm talking about the gain in human happiness; the smile on a child's face as understanding gradually improves; the warm inner glow that comes from having extended a hand to one's afflicted fellow man and done one's part to eliminate, however modestly, some of the deposit of human misery; the chance that helping the innocent retarded help themselves gives us to say, 'This is why I am here. This is what I was made for. This is what it really means to be an American.'"

The scientists must experience some of that as they tackle this insidious, unpredictable infiltrator of man's distinguishing characteristic, the ability to think. They know already, for example, that it will strike about once in 600 births; that we have only begun to gather a handful of minor weapons against a few of the more than 200 causes so far identified; that one form alone (mongolism) will dim to some degree the brainpower development potential of 7,000 babies a year; that twice as many human beings will be victims of MR as will succumb to total blindness, polio, cerebral palsy, and rheumatic heart disease combined; that of the five leading threats to health in order of frequency—cancer, heart disease, arthritis, mental illness, and mental retardation—only the last, MR, attacks children exclusively.

The range of causal factors is fantastic. Anything from too much X raying of pregnant women to excessive intake of vitamin D can be to blame. Prenatal threats include the Rh factor (a blood mismatch between baby and mother), inhaling carbon monoxide (car exhausts, cigarette smoke), German measles, venereal disease, too much anesthesia at delivery, inadequate oxygen supply (especially for the premature), and an extensive array of genetic disturbances or "inborn errors of metabolism" which cause brain-damaging nutritional deficiencies.

Probably the most infamous is PKU (phenylketonuria), now detectable at birth with an inexpensive blood test, and easily kept track of with later diaper-urine tests. Doctors control PKU, and nearly half a dozen other such disorders, by strict diets. The big thing is to detect them early. Once they do their damage, there is, as yet, no way to reverse it. Understandably, more and more states are following the lead of the few which already make such tests mandatory for all babies born within their borders.

Prevention can take other forms, too. Greater care with instruments at delivery, for instance, will save the still unhardened infant skull from inadvertent brain damage. Seat belts in cars, if the child is habitually fastened in, will hold down the alarming amount of retardation from little heads smacked against dashboards or onto floors. Special care should be taken of high fevers, particularly when convulsions accompany them, because all too often MR is the aftermath.

Double-checking for non-lead paints in toys and cribs is another cheap insurance policy against the brain damage lead is known to cause. Already, with "genetic counseling," we can advise parents of mongoloids whether they run a greater risk of having more such children, and also whether or not the child's disorder is transmissible if, as can happen with milder cases, he marries.

One day soon, doctors hope to come up with a German measles vaccine. (Meanwhile, exposing a girl child to a known case of the disease as "cheap immunization" entails hazards and should be undertaken only with a doctor's approval.) Further in the future, there may be ways, now under development, to use combined chemical and surgical techniques to modify the effect of runaway chromosomes, one of the prime sources of retardation, and give the MR victim the same chance a normal child has to learn to the utmost.

For here and now, there is much we are doing, much more we can and must do. On a long-term basis, after successful tryouts this past summer, "Head Start" schooling for the retarded will soon begin to capitalize on the discoveries of pioneers like Dr. Moore by providing such children, throughout the U.S. school system, with the early mental stimulation they require. Under another new federal program, elderly people heretofore at loose ends will find dignity and purpose for themselves, and an emotionally rewarding new lease on life, by bringing regularly to neglected youngsters in institutions and elsewhere—including the retarded—the experience of kindness and understanding that they need to prevent further erosion of their minds and personalities.

Prenatal care at the lower economic levels, where doctors have found that inadequate supervision during those crucial months leads to higher rates of retardation, is also improving, and must improve more.

Construction of new research and diagnostic centers is underway, along with custodial care expansion where needed, and additional facilities for all-important recreation and training—although as Senator Robert Kennedy's recent condemnation of New York State's seriously lagging institutional and educational plant for the retarded indicates, a somewhat more energetic spirit of cooperation with the opportunities afforded all states by his late brother's milestone legislation, would seem to be in order.

On the other hand, the push which government action is giving to our concern for the retarded is, in a way, only a large-scale version—welcome, of course, and overdue—of what enterprising private citizens had begun on their own to show what could be accomplished. Of U.S. businesses which in mounting numbers have made it policy to hire retarded workers for jobs they can measure up to—including such giants as the nationwide 1,100-store W. T.

Grant variety chain, and many smaller firms, hotels, restaurants, hospitals, landscapers, and service industries—few have had quite the extensive experience of Saul Robbins, president of Remco, the New Jersey toymaker. His verdict on these people as a sound investment—"business, not charity"—is typical.

They are reliably above average, Robbins has found. They present almost no absentee problems (in heavy snowstorms, the manager and the retarded have shown up, even when nobody else did). They take pride in their work. They do not job-hop. Properly instructed, they perform far more conscientiously than all but the best normal workers, produce steadily, and are much more concerned about not wasting materials and about seeing to it that even their co-workers take good care of company property. At Remco, they have occasioned no increase in workmen's compensation rates because not one has had a compensable injury. Other employers have found the same to be true. Often only the manager or foreman knows which of these personnel is retarded—and as one said, "I often forget."

Vice-President Humphrey considers employment of the retarded to be one of the prime ways to help solve their problems—and those of the businessman, both as businessman and taxpayer.

"Businessmen are lucky," he says. "By giving the retarded suitable employment they can literally transform lives. Nothing works such wonders in the outlook of a retarded working-age citizen as helping him secure gainful employment. And I don't mean just at his lowest potential, either."

Schooling is vital for such goals to be realized, needless to say, and until we find some way to train and recruit the 25,000 special teachers we need right now (beyond our existing slim but heroic band of 30,000) and the 90,000 we will require by 1970, we are in somewhat of a bind. Scholarship inducements will soon be forthcoming under President Johnson's implementation plans for the original Kennedy legislation, but the fruition of those plans will take time.

All the more reason, therefore, why anyone who is looking for "something to do" might consider lending a hand to ease what Hubert Humphrey calls "the chronic shortage of lay volunteers in virtually every type of program facility—diagnostic clinics, nursery classes, playgrounds, sheltered workshops, residence centers, half-way houses. Many vital tasks," he says, "have been and are being performed by able teenagers, working after school, on week-ends, and during summer vacation, with and for the retarded."

Among those in the forefront of lay volunteers are many Elks, giving freely of their resources to meet the challenge by adopting local-unit projects and providing the support necessary to make them succeed.

Here are some examples: Pueblo, Colo., Lodge last year made the local Association for Retarded Children its Project-of-the-Year by providing an activity center for retarded teenagers and adults who were not able to qualify for sheltered workshop operations. Elks are supplying money for speech therapy for children of the Ontario-Pomona, California, ARC who require it.

In Denver, Laradon Hall is an outstanding facility for the mentally retarded, offering both residential and sheltered-workshop care and educational opportunities. It is supported by Elks as the major project of the Colorado State Elks Association.

Last July, at the Washington State Elks Association Convention in Pasco, the Washington State ARC presented to the State Association a Certificate of Appreciation for the superb job the Elks are doing in sponsoring, at a cost of $150,000 a year, no fewer than eight traveling mobile clinics staffed with physical therapists who go into homes to work with retarded and cerebral palsied children.

How do groups who wish to respond in purse and in person get started? Usually they appoint a committee to help the retarded, then have the chairman get in touch with either the local unit of the ARC, or the National Association for Retarded Children (Department EM, 420 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10017), which sends a helpful supply of background information and literature. The committee and the ARC people get together to discuss current program needs and how the volunteers might want to lend a hand.

As Vice-President Humphrey says, "We have come a long way toward securing justice for the retarded. We still have a long way to go. There's a job to be done—a job all of us can take part in, and take pride in. Let's do it!"

Slippery Rock

classed before the game started. Although a football power in its own class—but one that gives no athletic aid whatsoever—the team had one of its worst seasons in 1964, 3-5-1. "We thought it would be a good game when we scheduled it, several years ago," says Slippery Rock's athletic director, William "Pop" Storer. "But things just didn't work out. We had a lot of fun, anyway."

Slippery Rock officials are constantly bombarded with requests for brochures, sweatshirts, pennants, and other mementos. Most often, requests are made for official Slippery Rock sweatshirts. These requests reached their peak two years ago after the Associated Press carried a story and photograph on a Slippery Rock alumna living in Seattle, who was booming her school in the Northwest.

"We received 10 to 20 letters a day from November to March from people—some as far as Japan—ordering sweatshirts," recalled Mrs. Irene Watson, who helps handle such requests. "I had to keep a girl on full-time just keeping up to the orders."

No one can recall exactly how the Slippery Rock craze started, although they trace it back to the 1930s when the odd, mirth-provoking name caught the fancy of football fans who couldn't believe there could be a school named Slippery Rock. A sportswriter from Boston named Bill Cunningham is said to have been one of the instigators of the original Slippery Rock movement. Intrigued with the name, he "adopted" the school and promoted it faithfully and freely in his columns. Once, in 1937, he even managed to get Slippery Rock to play in Boston against mighty Boston University. (Guess who lost, 20-0?)

Another man responsible for the Slippery Rock legend is Bruce Drake, now a real estate man in Norman, Okla., but who 30 years ago was basketball coach and football public address announcer at the University of Oklahoma. He recalls vividly the beginning of the Slippery Rock hysteria in Oklahoma.

"In 1933, we finally had a ticker machine installed in the PA booth at the stadium. It was the first time we had been able to get scores of other games and to keep the spectators informed. I had as my operator of the machine Bill Kaplan. All he did was take down the scores and pass them on to me. Bill liked to play parlays, and every Saturday he would lay his parlay cards out in front of him.

"On this particular day, he was having a bad day and all his teams on the cards had lost. About that time a score came in which read: 'Slippery Rock 7, Shippensburg State 15.' Bill said, 'Who ever heard of Slippery Rock?' and started to tear it up.

"I interrupted. 'Let me have that score; my old high school coach is Director of Athletics there.' Well, I read the score, the crowd went wild, and that's how Slippery Rock was born in Oklahoma."

tives to speak before Slippery Rock boosters clubs, school officials have done little to promote and perpetuate the Slippery Rock football legend. It's not that they lack a sense of humor. It's simply that their objective is to educate people, not to humor them.

The educational side of the college is sound. Slippery Rock is one of Pennsylvania's 14 state colleges and is hopeful of someday becoming a state university. The 1965 enrollment of some 2,800 is expected to double in five years. The school offers undergraduate and graduate programs in education and boasts that many graduates hold advanced positions in school administrations throughout the nation.

Even its coaches are educators first and athletic tutors second. Charles Godlasky, who resigned as head football coach last year to devote his full time to teaching, has a Ed.D. in health education. The new coach, Jack Olcott, has a masters degree in education from Bowling Green.

"We know our reputation stems from our football team and our unique name," says Mark Shiring, the school's public relations director. "But we are a real college and want to be recognized with the dignity deserving of any accredited college with a sound academic program. After all, that is our purpose. For too many years, people thought of us as a joke. We can laugh about the situation as much as anyone, but we want people to laugh with us, not at us."

And this football season, that is presumably what they're doing, as newspapers and radio newscasters across the nation faithfully report the major college football scores—and Slippery Rock's.

world I would want in the operator," says Dr. Farrell, "is the mother-in-law. She would be inclined to be too critical of what is being done. She would either dislike the new dentures completely, or she would like them so well you'd be suspicious that you might not be doing the right thing."

A Midwestern dentist reported that one of his patients was in the process of obtaining dentures when his wife suggested that he dye his hair to cover the gray. When the husband obtained his new dentures he looked 20 years younger than his wife, who found this new contrast intolerable. To placate her, the dentist had to make a more conventional, "old-fashioned type" of denture to even up their appearances.

Dr. Alvin Grunewald of Northwestern University Dental School read a scientific paper at a Midwinter Meeting of the Chicago Dental Society in which he stated that new dentures "can take 25 years off the appearance of some persons." This is particularly true, he said, in cases where the features have changed markedly because of missing teeth, ill-fitting dentures, or dentures that have been worn too long.

Dental scientists emphasize that the processes of physiology are always at work, and the tissues in our mouths are subject to change without notice. That's why dentists advise those who wear partial dental replacements to have examinations periodically. Only in this way can the dentist determine what preventive and maintenance procedures are necessary to keep the mouth healthy and the appliance fitting properly. Regular checkups are important for the complete denture wearer, too. They will allow the dentist to notice any tissue change.

You don't notice facial and muscular differences as you stand face-to-face with your mirror every day. You see yourself too often to notice these changes. Telltale wrinkles and depressions form around the lips when dentures don't fit right.

Preparation of a denture involves a lot of time and skill, and the dentist's fee must take this into account. Taking advantage of everyone's desire to save money, "quacks" come in and offer bargain-basement prices in illegal dental laboratories. These usually thrive in large urban areas where they can hide under the cover of a residential neighborhood basement or the back of a store.

Dentures are also being constructed illegally by individual "dental bootleggers" or "moonlighters." They generally are dental laboratory processing technicians who earn extra money by catering to the universal desire to cut down on health expenses.

But improperly fitted artificial teeth can irritate gums and mouth and tissues, which may cause destruction of the supporting bone. Dr. Ira E. Klein, clinical professor of prosthetic dentistry, New York University College of Dentistry, says Americans must realize that when they allow people who are not trained in the basic sciences and who do not have clinical experience to construct dentures, they are running the risk of injury to their mouth, possibly even cancer.

He stresses the point that "technicians are not trained to diagnose; they know only the technical, mechanical, or materialistic portion of denture construction. Artificial teeth made under this system are totally inadequate. Only a slim minority of dental technicians engage in this illegal practice, but in many cities like Chicago, New York, and Los Angeles, they are taking millions of dollars a year from the public while exposing them to health hazards."

Recently when Edgar T. Stephens, the chief investigator for the Illinois State Dental Society, posed as a "patient" of an unlicensed dentist, the bogus doctor offered to teach him to practice dentistry! This arrogant disregard for the sanctity of the law resulted in a jail term for the phoney practitioner.

In a famous Illinois legal case reported by authors Julian and Eleanor Jackson in Dentists to the World, Dean A. Raymond Baralt, Jr., of Loyola University Dental School testified that in their dental school clinic at least one-third of the patients without teeth were found, by x-ray examination, to have underlying pathological conditions—cysts, soft and hard spicules, and bony structures—all of which affect the type of denture needed. He made the point that prosthetic dentistry was one of the most intricate arts that affect oral health and therefore general health. Dr. James H. Keith of Evanston, Ill., well known oral surgeon, testified that on a first visit for dentures oral surgery was required in a majority of cases and also was frequently needed during fitting.

Prosthodontists are warning the public against trying to correct the fit of dentures with do-it-yourself reliners and repair kits. If your denture doesn't fit comfortably, don't hesitate to go back to your dentist for advice and correction.

Nothing, however, takes the place of a good program of prevention—thorough oral hygiene, proper diet, and regular examinations by your dentist while you still have your natural teeth intact. But if you do have to lose your teeth, take heart. The skill and art of modern prosthetic science can add years to your smile—and a steak and corn on the cob to your dinner. • •

JAMES ROY NICHOLSON

Past Grand Exalted Ruler James R. Nicholson's death on August 31 ended a career that spanned 65 years of Elk history, and he was the author of or a leading contributor to many of the most brilliant pages of that history.

Brother Nicholson was a remarkable man in so many ways. Perhaps one of his most remarkable attributes was that, despite the passing years, he stayed contemporary. He always lived in the present, always was receptive to new ideas, new ways of doing things, better ways.

This is not to say that he ignored the past. Quite the contrary, for to him the past was a storehouse of wisdom and useful experience upon which he drew abundantly to meet today's challenges. To him the past was never the shackle to action or the bar to change that it is to so many when they grow old.

His modernity of mind and spirit was underscored by his recorded response to the resolution adopted at the Grand Lodge Convention last July felicitating him upon the Fiftieth Anniversary of his election as Grand Exalted Ruler. If there were among the 4,000 Elks present any who anticipated a paean for the past from this 87-year-old man, they must have been pleasantly surprised at the youthful spirit of his approbation for the changes that he had witnessed in the Order down the years, and at his confident contemplation of the future.

He applauded the change from the old days when only men attended Grand Lodge Conventions to the widespread custom of today of wives attending with their husbands.

He gave his wholehearted approval to the growth of family participation, with Elks lodges providing recreational and other facilities for the entire Elk family, and he expressed the hope that the trend would continue.

He was delighted with the expansion, especially in the past 20 years, of Elkdom's programs for American youth and for relief of the physically handicapped.

He cheered the vitality that has enabled Elkdom to adapt as the country's way of life has changed, to stay modern and appeal to men of every generation.

"It is because of this," he said, "that I can say that the Order of Elks is a far more powerful force in American life today than it was 50 years ago. It will continue to grow in strength and favor as it remains responsive to new ideas that are soundly conceived, while remaining faithful to the proven values of the past."

Words worth remembering, they could well serve as Elkdom's sure guide to the future. It is no wonder that when he had concluded the audience rose spontaneously to cheer and applaud in a moving testimonial to a man who had just made a significant addition to his already magnificent legacy to Elkdom.

Yet, in a very important sense, Brother Nicholson was old-fashioned. He gave uncompromising allegiance to a code of personal conduct that marked him a gentleman of the old school, a gentleman in every sense of the word, of unquestioned integrity, loyal without limit to his friends and associates, a scrupulous respecter of the dignity and rights of others, of charming courtesy, kindly, thoughtful, and generous.

While the Order of Elks had held his loyal affection from the time he joined Springfield, Mass., Lodge in 1900, his interests ranged widely and his business activities, where he met with great success, took him into several fields. His friendships and acquaintances included many of the great in public life, business, sports, the theater.

With Emerson, one of his favorite writers, Past Grand Exalted Ruler Nicholson believed that to have a friend one had to be a friend. It was thus that he won and held the admiration and respect of so many friends over the long years.

Why the Grand Lodge Meets in July

A question frequently asked is why the Grand Lodge always holds its annual Convention in hot July instead of other times of the year when the weather is more desirable, such as April or October. Several reasons have been advanced for the midsummer sessions, but it was not until we were looking up a matter in the Grand Lodge Proceedings that we learned the true reason. It arises from the fact that the Order of Elks was founded by members of the theatrical profession.

Prior to 1888, Grand Lodge sessions were held in December, which was at the height of the theatrical season, and as a consequence many members of the Order who were actors, entertainers, or otherwise associated with the theater, were unable to attend. This produced a growing discontent among the "professionals" in the Order, who at that time constituted a large percentage of the members. As a result the proposal was made at the 1886 Grand Lodge session that it meet in the summer, when theaters were closed (lacking the comfort of air-conditioning). The Grand Lodge of 1887 voted to meet in the second week of July thereafter, and so the custom was established.

Elkdom's early close association with the theater should not be forgotten because we owe so much to it. This debt was underscored by Grand Exalted Ruler English in urging the shift to summer in 1887: "During the year just closed we have been placed under renewed obligations to the theatrical profession, who have ever willingly volunteered their valuable services to aid in swelling our charity fund, by means of benefits and entertainments. Ours is essentially a theatrical Order, ever nurtured and maintained by members of the theatrical profession, whose labor and devotion through many a trying hour have finally brought it to its present eminence, prosperity, and success."

Air-conditioning makes the question of weather largely academic today, and convenience of theatrical members has been replaced by family participation as a compelling season for summer sessions.
