A Message from the Grand Exalted Ruler

YOUTH WEEK OBSERVANCE

“ELKS NATIONAL YOUTH WEEK” commences May 1. Its purpose is to specially recognize and honor the youth of this country. I sincerely hope each lodge is giving this program the wholehearted support it deserves.

WHILE TRADITIONALLY we select one week for this observance, in fact we devote the entire year to the promotion of projects involving our young people. Every dollar and every hour we spend on them represent the greatest investment you and I will ever make.

I HAVE GREAT ADMIRATION for this generation. Spiritual guidance, educational advancement and medical progress have combined to produce in them ideals, intelligence, poise and physical attributes never before known. The antics of a few do not affect this evaluation. Every generation has had its share of bums.

BUT THESE young people want, and need, acceptance. Any credibility gap between us must be bridged. We have too much to give to each other to permit such isolation. Understanding between responsible people, no matter their age, will result in the respect so vital to human relations.

THERE IS NO Dow Jones Index on the gains and recessions in the progress of our young people. Forces far greater than those economic are involved. Interest, understanding, appreciation, engagement and communication can reap a bountiful harvest.

I HAVE SPOKEN of the many facets of Elksdom's legacy. None can be more important than contribution to the youth of America. During this week in May we salute them and pledge anew our support as they move forward to the positions of responsibility they must assume.

• Thank you for the sports column, "Any Iceberg in a Storm," [SportsAction], February, 1973].

Having just left the confines of Chicagoland to settle in our new home on Lake Manitou, I'm sitting here watching the ice break-up and the first of the motorboats roar past. All winter long I've fought off the cries of five active children and succeeded in not buying a snowmobile. I hate motors for a mode of conveyance, and would rather rely on the Good Lord's wind, or muscle. During the winter, a canoe and sailboat hung uselessly below our lakeside deck. Now they are ready to launch, and help me fend the cry for a speedboat this year.

In the meantime, I'm going to be working on converting my sailboat to an ice-boat, and get that full year's use. Thanks.

• As one of the 1½ million loyal Americans GER Francis M. Smith speaks for I do not wish him to convey my congratulations to Richard Nixon for an alleged "just and honorable peace in Indo-China," nor do I want Brother Smith sending my "sincere thanks for your untiring efforts to that end."

As a loyal American I have disagreed with Mr. Nixon's handling of that war as I disagreed with his predecessor's. However, as the war was a political issue, I divorced my comments regarding it from my membership in the B.P.O.E. I suggest that GER Smith do the same.

the ten- speed explosion

■ If you think the current explosion of bicycles on every street, path and lane in the United States is a modern fad, just check with old Kirkpatrick MacMillan, Mile-A-Minute Murphy, or Monsieur De Sivrace. Bicycles have been around, and very popular, for a long time.

MacMillan spent time in the slammer more than a century ago for riding a machine meant to replace the beloved, standard bicycle, creating on that day what folks said was a "public nuisance." Years ago Murphy rode his bike an incredible sixty-miles-per-hour, behind a race car.

And De Sivrace? He is credited with the invention of what has become a sleek, fast, lightweight, geared method of transportation which is at one time economical, fun, and good for you (which darned few things are today which are also economical and fun). It all started with the Monsieur's ungainly contraption back in 1790.

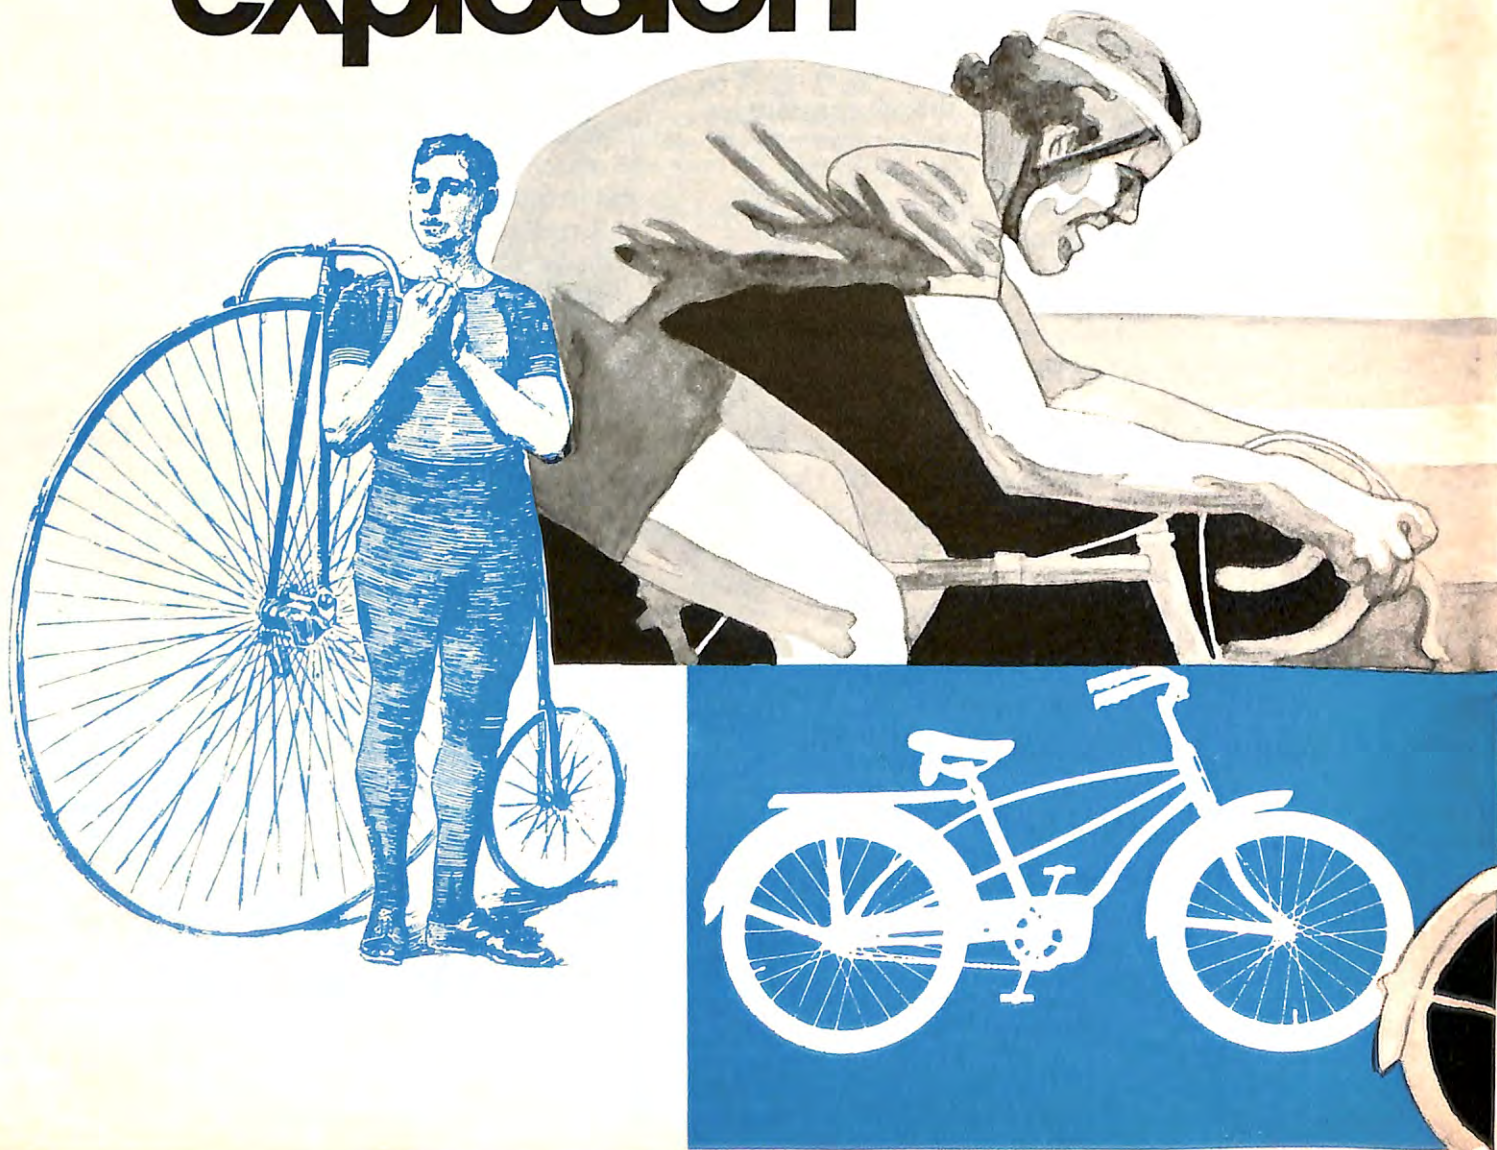

As a matter of fact, leading heart experts have been extolling the virtues of bike riding for many years, though people are just recently beginning to listen. In the Schwinn Bicycle Company motion picture THE MAGIC OF THE BICYCLE, Dr. Paul Dudley White says, "There are four reasons I give for vigorous use of the leg muscles . . . not simply the arm muscles . . . and the first is physiological. We as bipeds need something to help us keep the blood circulating up from the lower part of the body.

"The leg muscles are very important. When they contract, they squeeze the veins (which have valves) and actually pump blood up toward the heart. This allows the heart to receive more blood with which to supply the brain."

Dr. White also lists the psychological benefits of bike riding. It is an enjoyable exercise which is a fine antidote for the stress and mental fatigue of modern living. Bike riding, Dr. White continues, can help to prevent thrombosis, blood clots in the legs due to sluggish circulation.

And he concludes his list by pointing out the current clear evidence that vigorous use of muscles, such as in bike riding, helps delay the onset of arteriosclerosis, a modern epidemic in the United States.

"These are the four reasons I give for vigorous use of the leg muscles," says Dr. White, "such as those performed best perhaps on bicycles."

Of course Dr. White is not suggesting that we all rush out and buy a bicycle and then pedal off, huffing and puffing over hills and across valleys. That would kill some of us just as quickly as the nasty things mentioned above. But the fact is that overweight and generally poor conditioning has been called America's number 1 health problem, and bicycling can be a significant aid.

Oddly enough, Monsieur De Sivrace did not kill himself riding his machine according to recorded history. His "bicycle," though, was something to tax the endurance of the finest athlete. Try to picture this if you can.

Two wooden wheels with wooden spokes, heavy and unwieldy, similar to but smaller than the bulky wheels on the covered wagons of the early west. Across the top, a board, with wooden forks fore and aft to support the wheels. Projecting up from the front end, a handle . . . not to steer with, but just to help support and steady the man on the board.

You crawled a-straddle of this interesting machine, and then you pushed it along with your feet . . . accounting, no doubt, for the name "Walkalong." It is likely that you coasted downhill once you mastered the balance of a non-steerable two-wheeler (which was tough on shoe leather, since you had to drop one foot and then the other to stay upright).

De Sivrace's new mode of transportation actually became quite popular in the early 1800's, and nobody chuckled or even gave a second glance when a tailed and top-hatted man swept past on the way to the opera on his Walkalong. What those men did with their ladies nobody is quite sure, since there is no record of a Monsieur De Sivrace sidecar.

Baron Von Drais of Karlsruhe, Germany, an erect, mustachioed man, was also a man of great vision. In 1816 he studied the ungainly Walkalong, and he "perfected" it. He developed a steerable front wheel. Almost immediately, as we all once said of the magnificent '36 Ford Sedan, people began to insist that this two wheeled way of getting around had reached its ultimate state of development.

Of course you still had to push it along.

Von Drais named his new machine a "Draisine," but the name "Hobby Horse" stuck.

Everybody knows that Americans are never quite satisfied with European inventions. Denis Johnson, in 1820, acquired a new Hobby Horse and dismantled it. When he put it back together (and this in itself, of course, did not require a master of engineering) he added an adjustable saddle, a cushioned set of arm rests, and an improved handlebar.

The new device was called a "dandy Horse" and it skyrocketed in popularity. Just everybody had to have a new Dandy Horse. If you didn't have one, you were simply nobody. Some families had two, and even three, locked to the hitching post out front.

Still, the machine had to be walked. And nobody seemed to mind, nor to have the imagination to do anything more than penalize inventors who might seek to improve on perfection. MacMillan, poor old Mac, came along and added pedals to the Dandy Horse. Sacrilege! There was panic in the streets the day Mac brought his invention out of the back room to test it. One lady devotee of the good old Dandy Horse brought her umbrella down on Mac's unprotected head, and the riot started. A huge crowd gathered around, and horses were frightened, and children cried for their parents. They clapped Mac in jail.

But you can't hold back progress and the pedal idea took hold, especially when Ernest Michaux, in 1860, attached the pedals to the front wheel (instead of Mac's way, through levers to the rear). Thus was created the "Bone-shaker," an unsprung monster with huge, hard wheels that rattled and clanked over the cobblestones of Paris, and certainly accounted for more lower tract problems than any ten of the more questionable sidewalk cafes of the day put together.

Pierre Lallement, an employee of Michaux, further "improved" the Bone-shaker, and was granted the very first patent on a bicycle, in 1866.

Today, major manufacturers of what the Lallement patent has become, have but one real problem. That is to satisfy the demand. According to Schwinn, Huffman, and the others, it will be years before an adult can go into a bicycle shop (not a discount store, where these major brands are normally not sold) and buy, on the spot, a new, ten-speed model. There are waiting lists, because nobody really expected the great fad to turn into a great boom.

Foreign bike builders cannot fill the gap either. England's Raleigh, France's Peugeot and Japan's diplomatically named American Eagle make about one-third of the bikes sold in the United States, and they insist that they will be behind in orders for the foreseeable future.

Nor is the bicycle a child's toy. Nearly one half of all companies is geared to the far more sophisticated adult models. Most of these have from three to ten "speeds," or more.

There is a rumor that one of the early developers of the "Ordinary" attempted suicide by leaping from the seat of his creation. All he managed to do was break his leg, and ultimately he was thankful his attempt failed. Perhaps the story is true, for the seat of this high-wheeler was often higher than a grown man's head. Still popular with certain riding clubs around the country, the Ordinary was invented in England and introduced to the United States at the Philadelphia Exposition in 1876. The pedal-equipped front wheel is balanced by a tiny rear wheel, and the whole thing is as difficult to mount as it is to ride until you get the hang of it all.

Near the turn of the century, the wheels became the same size and a chain drive was added along with cushioned saddles, rubber tires, ball bearings, coaster brakes and adjustable handlebars. The bike looked much like what we have today, and the "Golden Age" of bicycles had arrived.

In 1896 about 4,000,000 people were regularly riding bicycles in the United States, and by 1899 there were more than three hundred factories turning out bicycles by the thousands, and parts for bicycles.

The tandem bicycle, the "bicycle built for two," became popular during this hey-day of two wheelers. It remained popular during the twenties and thirties, and the model is now enjoying a resurgence of popularity. There is a tandem model in the current Schwinn line, with gearshift.

In 1899 "Mile-A-Minute" Murphy had a special windshield built on the caboose of a train, and a smooth board track built for a long stretch between the railroad tracks. Nestled in behind the windshield, Murphy pedaled his bike sixty miles per hour, thus winning his immortal name. The famous Ralph DePalma, a motor racing champion who finally won the "Indy 500," learned to go fast on bicycles first. Wilbur and Orville Wright started with a bi-

AROUND WASHINGTON

A NEW SERVICE that has become very popular in the West Virginia capital of Charleston is called "Buzz the Fuzz." Anyone who has a question relating to the police department can get it answered by dialing a special number in the Charleston telephone book. Senator Jennings Randolph of West Virginia thinks it's such a good idea that some other big city police departments might like to copy it.

FIVE WOMEN who organized their own Washington real estate firm—Arnold Bardley, Sargent, Davy & Chew—have done very well by specializing in top bracket clients such as Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri, HEW Secretary Chester Weinberger, former Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard and Presidential Assistant H. R. Haldeman. In their first year in business, they sold 65 houses at prices which averaged out to $90,000 a piece.

MEN'S NIGHT. The Charles Town, W. Va., Turf Club has decided, it says, to "strike a blow for men's lib." It began admitting men free to the races every Tuesday night this spring on the theory that "it is about time the men got a break." It has been careful, however, to give the ladies equal time. They have been admitted free every Thursday night.

COMMUTERS who travel by bus from the suburbs to their jobs in Washington have been promised new buses and improved service now that the four privately owned bus lines operating here have been purchased and unified under public ownership by the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority. As a first step, the transit agency has begun issuing free inter-line transfers which saves the commuters 35 cents a ride.

NEW BUMPER STICKER here is catching on because of its simple appeal. It says, "I Love Zoo. Be a Friend of the National Zoo."

10,520 COMPLAINTS against the airlines were filed by passengers in 1972, the Consumer Affairs office of the Civil Aeronautics Board reports. This was a jump of 28 percent over the year before. Does this mean that airline service is deteriorating? Not according to the CAB. It said the increase came about because the airlines are carrying more passengers and more people have learned about the existence of the CAB's Consumer Affairs office.

TEXTBOOK for students of police administration is being written by Washington Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson. The chief, who does his writing mostly on weekends, says there is a growing market for a textbook in this field since there are now more than 800 universities offering courses in police administration.

BUREAUCRATS are thriving these days. The U.S. Civil Service reports that the number of employees holding top bracket pay jobs in the government rose from 22,477 in 1958 to 72,669 in 1971. The salary of an employee in general schedule grade 14, the level where the big money begins, was $11,355 in 1958. In 1971, it had risen to $20,815. Over the same period, the top salary in the civil service, for a GS-18 employee, went up from $17,500 to $36,000.

LIKE MANY VIPS, Presidential Assistant Henry Kissinger rents the white tie and tails he wears to formal functions at the White House. It costs $17 each time but it's a convenience for Kissinger as his weight fluctuates, according to Formal Attire Ltd. where he gets the outfits. Sometimes he is a 42, sometimes a 43. By renting, instead of owning his own suit in a single size, he is always sure of a comfortable fit.

SIGNS IN ENGLAND get their point across but in a politely worded manner in contrast to the terse style used in America. At the entrance of a big London park, for example, you don't see "No Dogs Allowed" or "Curb Your Dog." Instead, the sign says, "Dogs must be kept on a lead in this passage and must not be allowed to foul the footway."

TRAFFIC JAMS while crossing the Chesapeake Bay bridge have added hours to the journey from Washington to the Atlantic coast resorts in Maryland and Delaware. But finally after much controversy about where it would be located and a three- to four-year delay, a new $120 million bridge built alongside the existing span will be opened on June 28 and Washingtonians can hardly wait.

PROTECTION for congressmen as they sit in the House chamber may be provided by a bullet-proof shield enclosing the public gallery. The House has talked about putting up a shield ever since four Puerto Rican separatists opened fire from the galleries on March 1, 1954, and wounded five members. Many members are opposed to it however, because they feel it would be a symbolic barrier between them and the people. The Senate has no plans for anything like this in its chamber.

PRESIDENT'S ADVICE to his Cabinet is "make each day count." To underscore this, Richard Nixon has given each Cabinet member an unusual four-year calendar book. On each page is marked the number of days left in the second term.

AIR TRAVELERS who fly Pan American and Trans World Airlines are not going to have a chance to ride in the super-sonic Concorde after all. The two air lines cancelled their options to buy 13 of the planes being produced as a joint project by the British and French governments. They would have had to charge Concorde passengers a much higher fare because the Concorde costs more and carries fewer passengers than the Jumbo 747 and other wide-bodied jets. And, since they did not think this would have been a good economic proposition, they decided to do without the 1,200 to 1,400 mile-per-hour plane.

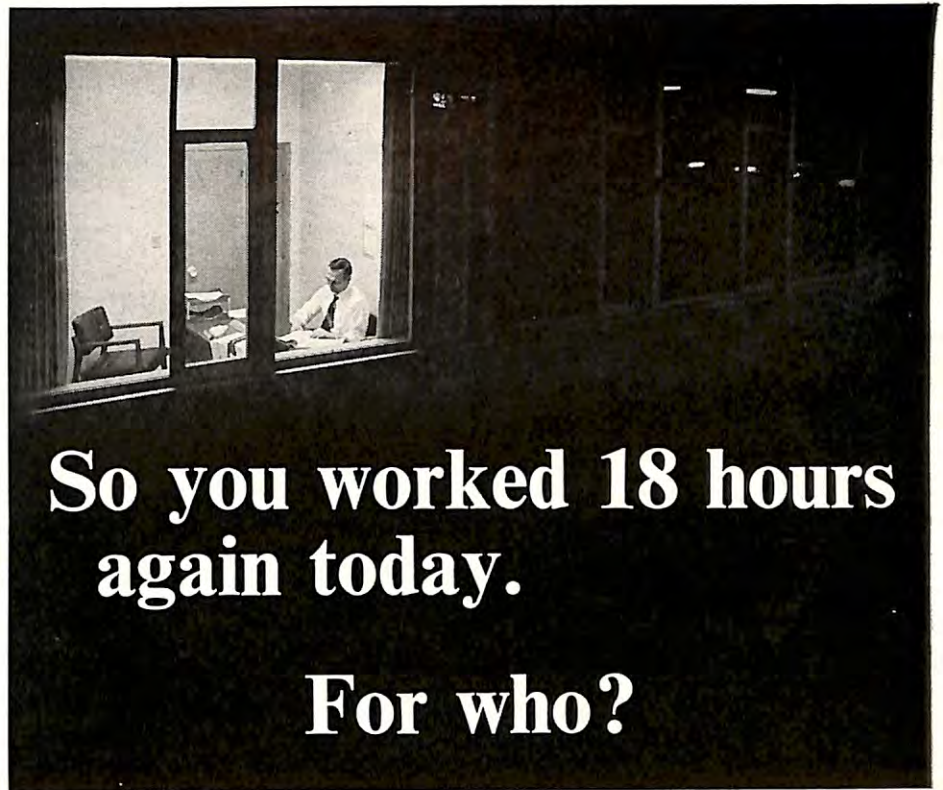

GOING ABROAD this year? If so, you might be interested to know that the State Department has put together more than 160 booklets that provide up-to-date information on the people, government, political conditions, public health, history and economy of the various countries and territories around the world. To get one on the country you will visit, send 20 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402 and ask for "Background Notes" on the name of the country.

BOW TIES which were very popular in the 1930s are coming back and there's a slightly new look about them. To accommodate deeper shirt collars, the 1973 bows are wider and longer than those men wore 40 years ago. Washington stores report they are selling well here and in other key cities across the U.S.

'THE FLU-DRIVER' is what the Cognac Producers of France call their new drink which they recommend as a spring tonic. It is made of an ounce of cognac and three ounces of orange juice served on the rocks.

LIFE INSURANCE for dogs is offered by insurance companies in Sweden, the Swedish embassy reports. For $5 a year, an owner can take out a $60 policy good for 10 years which is the maximum period of coverage. And for an additional $2 a year, the owner can get health insurance that will pay the dog's veterinarian bills.

A Salute to Cheese

Fromage! Formaggio! Kase! Ost! Queso! Whether served in France, Italy, Germany, Norway, or Spain, cheese is indispensable to international cuisine. Nations boast about their native cheeses, but rivalry is nonexistent because everyone agrees that there is no "best" cheese. Each variety is enjoyed for its own unique flavor and texture.

According to legend, an Arabian merchant named Kanana discovered cheese by accident around 9000 B.C. He had set out on a journey carrying a supply of milk in a pouch made of a young cow's stomach. When he stopped for a drink several hours later, he found that the milk had separated into white, milky lumps and a thin, cloudy liquid. He tasted the strange food out of curiosity and discovered that it was delicious. Kanana repeated the experiment until he realized that a substance we now call renin, an enzyme found in a calf's stomach, caused the milk to separate.

The first cheese was actually a forerunner of our modern cottage cheese, the simplest of cheeses, but it wasn't long before other cheeses appeared on the world scene. Some were discovered by accident and others were invented as a result of deliberate experimentation. Early nomadic people carried cheese extensively because it provided the values of milk in a solid and longer lasting form. It was easy to transport over long distances as they journeyed from one camp to the next, and it provided ample sustenance along the way.

Soldiers since the time of Genghis Khan have included cheese as a part of their basic ration. They valued it as a source of strength and endurance. So did the ancient Greek Olympic race contenders who ate cheese and dried fruit while in training.

Cheese figures prominently in the legends and literature of ancient times. Even the Old Testament mentions that David was delivering cheese to an Israelite leader when he met Goliath in that famous encounter. The Persian philosopher, Zoroaster, lived in the wilderness for 30 years on nothing but cheese and fruit, apparently a boon to his clear-headed thinking. The Greeks and Romans also prized cheese, not only for its obvious food value, but also for its contributions to the sumptuous meals of the upper classes.

During the Middle Ages, the monks took over the occupation of cheese making and transformed it into an art. They developed new varieties of cheese, carefully recording the processes and ingredients used. The monasteries, where excellent cuisine was traditional, observed numerous days of fast and abstinence throughout the year. Meat was not allowed on those days, so the enterprising monks developed recipes using cheese, eggs, and vegetables which were as rich and flavorful as any roast.

Industrialization did not affect cheese production until fairly modern times. Those farmers who raised dairy cattle also produced cheese on a small scale—enough for their own families with maybe a little extra to sell at the market with their vegetables and fruits. It was not until 1851 that Jesse Williams, a New York dairy man, established the first cheese factory in the United States. England's first cheese factory opened at Derby in 1870, producing Cheddar with the milk of 300 cows. Cheesemaking rapidly grew into an important industry in the United States and many European countries. The factory system made it possible to produce more cheese at a lower cost, and the demand seemed to be unlimited.

Today the cheese industry is still expanding. Between 1950 and 1970 the amount of cheese produced in the United States increased to 1,986 million pounds a year, nearly doubling in just 20 years. Cheese factories have sprouted wherever dairy cattle thrive; the leading U.S. dairy and cheese states are Wisconsin, New York, Illinois, Michigan, Kentucky and Oregon.

Some cheeses require more steps to produce than others, but they all start with the separation of milk into curds and whey. This is achieved by adding either rennin or a bacterial "starter" to huge rectangular vats of heated milk. As more heat is applied, the lumps of curd shrink and become firmer until they are so compact that the whey can be drained off. The curd is then cut, salted, and packed into hoops for curing. These basic procedures are followed in the manufacture of all cheeses. How, then, can there be more than 400 different varieties of cheese? Simple. Seemingly minor variations in the process produce cheeses with widely differing flavors.

The classic example occurred when Bordens moved their Liederkranz plant from upper New York state to Van Wert, Ohio. Everything was moved to the new factory including the equipment, the "mother culture," and even some of the original employees. Still, the cheese tasted different. All attempts to duplicate the New York Liederkranz failed until, as a last resort, they smeared the walls with cheese made at the old plant. Success!! It was then that they realized that even the bacteria in the air affect the flavor of the cheese produced.

Probably the most important factor in determining a cheese's taste is the kind and quality of milk used. Although cow, sheep, and goat cheeses are the most common, some varieties are also produced from the milk of the ewe, reindeer, buffalo, camel, llama, zebra and yak. Whether the milk is whole, raw, or pasteurized also affects the cheese's flavor.

The ripening process plays a star role in the cheese's development. A sharp Cheddar cures for 12 months at 35°, while Limburger ripens at 50° for only two months. Swiss cheese has one of the most complicated curing processes. After salting, it is held for seven days in a special room kept at 50°. It is then moved to a room which is kept at 70° with a relative humidity of 85 per cent for about four weeks. These exacting conditions are necessary for the perfect formation of the Swiss's characteristic "eyes." When the eyes are formed, the Swiss cheese is stored in a warehouse at 35° for further aging.

Since there are more than 400 different varieties of natural cheese, they are usually grouped into "families." The Roquefort "family" includes not only Roquefort, but also Stilton, Gorgonzola, Bleu, and all the other blue-veined cheeses. The United States Department of Agriculture lists the 18 basic families thus: Brick, Camembert, Cheddar, Cottage, Cream, Edam, Gouda, Hand, Limburger, Neufchâtel, Parmesan, Provolone, Romano, Roquefort, Sapsago, Swiss, Trappist, and the Whey cheeses.

Anyone who limits himself to Cheddar when it comes to cheese is truly missing out on a variety of taste experiences. Cheeses run the texture spectrum from the soft, buttery creams to the rubbery Swiss, to Parmesan, which is so hard that it is usually grated rather than cut. In taste, cheeses range from the blandness of Cottage cheese to Limburger, renowned for its earthy flavor and aroma. Admittedly, Limburger and the other strong cheeses are not for everyone, but it would be a shame for one to never become acquainted with such a wide variety of delicious cheeses.

Young and old, rich and poor, episcure and plebian—almost everyone likes cheese. In the past 30 years its popularity has increased tremendously in the United States. In 1940 Americans consumed an average of six pounds of cheese each year, and now we eat 11.4 pounds. Still, we are far behind most of the European countries where cheese is as much a part of their heritage as it is their diet.

The Swiss lead all the other countries of the world, consuming an average of 20 pounds of cheese a year. They would not consider a meal complete unless it included some Emmentant days of his life. His friends help him celebrate at his Christening, betrothal, marriage; and finally they eat the last of his Wheel of Life at his funeral.

France boasts a greater variety of cheese (and wine, incidentally) than any other country. According to the French, their piquant Roquefort is the King of Cheeses, and Brie is the delicate queen. The first Roquefort, like the first cheese, was discovered by accident. A shepherd tending his sheep near the town of Roquefort, France, left his lunch of bread and cheese in a cave. When he returned to the same cave several weeks later, he found the bread spoiled, and the cheese covered with a delicate green mold, the veins characteristic of all blue cheeses. After he tasted the delicious cheese, the shepherd experimented until he realized that the mold was produced by a substance we now call Penicillium Roqueforti which is made from rye bread-crumbs. The world's best Roquefort is still produced in the Causse region of France and cured in the same caves where the shepherd left his lunch. The cool, humid caves provide just the right amount of oxygen to ferment the cheese to a perfect Roquefort.

Cheese is, without a doubt, one of the most versatile foods around. It appears at breakfast, lunch, dinner, snacks, and dessert. Cheese is mixed in casseroles, chopped in salads, melted in sauces, sliced in sandwiches, and devoured for pure enjoyment. Some connoisseurs contend that cheese has a natural affinity for starches such as bread, spaghetti, macaroni, and potatoes. Others prefer cheese and fruit combinations—Roquefort with pears, Brick with tokay grapes, Cheddar with apples, or Gouda with pineapple. Still others relish their favorite cheese served with a glass of chilled wine. What other food is so natural in so many different surroundings?

There are two rules to follow in cooking with cheese which could mark the difference between a rubbery, tasteless crust and a smoothly moist complement to pizza, lasagna, or a toasted cheese sandwich:

1. Use low temperature
2. Do not overcook

Cheese separates when it is heated above 150°, so just remember that it is cooked as soon as it melts.

Nutritionalists recommend that we all eat one serving of cheese each day. Since cheese contains the same food values as milk in a concentrated form, it is an important source of protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron, vitamin A, thiamine and riboflavin. You don't need to be a health food faddist to appreciate the wealth of vitamins and minerals available in cheese.

A fact that many Americans don't realize is that, nutritionally, cheese can substitute for meat. Both are "complete" protein foods because they both contain all of the essential amino acids which make up a protein. (Protein is the body-building substance that contributes to growth and supplies us with energy.) It has become a status symbol with many Americans that, besides having two cars in the garage, a TV, and a stereo, they should also serve meat at every meal. Yet, there are many delicious cheese dishes which provide the same protein value at a far more economical price.

Why not host a cheese-tasting party and introduce your friends to a unique flavor experience? Or try buying a different kind of cheese each week until you've sampled the 18 basic families. You'll be glad you did! ■

The Lazy Man's Way to Riches

'Most People Are Too Busy Earning a Living to Make Any Money'

I used to work hard. The 18-hour days. The 7-day weeks.

But I didn't start making big money until I did less—a lot less.

For example, this ad took about 2 hours to write. With a little luck, it should earn me 50, maybe a hundred thousand dollars.

What's more, I'm going to ask you to send me 10 dollars for something that'll cost me no more than 50 cents. And I'll try to make it so irresistible that you'd be a darned fool not to do it.

After all, why should you care if I make $9.50 profit if I can show you how to make a lot more?

What if I'm so sure that you will make money my Lazy Man's Way that I'll make you the world's most unusual guarantee?

And here it is: I won't even cash your check or money order for 31 days after I've sent you my material.

That'll give you plenty of time to get it, look it over, try it out.

If you don't agree that it's worth at least a hundred times what you invested, send it back. Your uncashed check or money order will be put in the return mail.

The only reason I won't send it to you and bill you or send it C.O.D. is because both these methods involve more time and money.

And I'm already going to give you the biggest bargain of your life.

Because I'm going to tell you what it took me 11 years to perfect: How to make money the Lazy Man's Way.

O.K.—now I have to brag a little. I don't mind it. And it's necessary—to prove that sending me the 10 dollars... which I'll keep "in escrow" until you're satisfied... is the smartest thing you ever did.

I live in a home that's worth $100,000. I know it is, because I turned down an offer for that much. My mortgage is less than half that, and the only reason I haven't paid it off is because my Tax Accountant says I'd be an idiot.

My "office," about a mile and a half from my home, is right on the beach. My view is so breathtaking that most people comment that they don't see how I get any work done. But I do enough. About 6 hours a day, 8 or 9 months a year.

The rest of the time we spend at our mountain "cabin." I paid $30,000 for it—cash.

I have 2 boats and a Cadillac. All paid for.

We have stocks, bonds, investments, cash in the bank. But the most important thing I have is priceless: time with my family.

And I'll show you just how I did it—the Lazy Man's Way—a secret that I've shared with just a few friends 'til now.

It doesn't require "education." I'm a high school graduate.

It doesn't require "capital." When I started out, I was so deep in debt that a lawyer friend advised bankruptcy as the only way out. He was wrong. We paid off our debts and, outside of the mortgage, don't owe a cent to any man.

It doesn't require "luck." I've had more than my share, but I'm not promising you that you'll make as much money as I have. And you may do better; I personally know one man who used these principles, worked hard, and made 11 million dollars in 7 years. But money isn't everything.

It doesn't require "talent." Just enough brains to know what to look for. And I'll tell you that.

It doesn't require "youth." One woman I worked with is over 70. She's travelled the world over, making all the money she needs, doing only what I taught her.

It doesn't require "experience." A widow in Chicago has been averaging $25,000 a year for the past 5 years, using my methods.

What does it require? Belief. Enough to take a chance. Enough to absorb what I'll send you. Enough to put the principles into action. If you do just that—nothing more, nothing less—the results will be hard to believe. Remember—I guarantee it.

You don't have to give up your job. But you may soon be making so much money that you'll be able to. Once again—I guarantee it.

The wisest man I ever knew told me something I never forgot: "Most people are too busy earning a living to make any money."

Don't take as long as I did to find out he was right.

I'll prove it to you, if you'll send in the coupon now. I'm not asking you to "believe" me. Just try it. If I'm wrong, all you've lost is a couple of minutes and an 8-cent stamp. But what if I'm right?

Joe, you may be full of beans, but what have I got to lose? Send me the Lazy Man's Way to Riches. But don't deposit my check or money order for 31 days after shipment of my order.

If I return your material—for any reason—within that time, return my uncashed check or money order to me. On that basis, here's my ten dollars.

cycle repair shop, and in fact used certain bicycle parts in the construction of their airplane.

Of course whatever one generation can do, the next can do better. With Charles Murphy's record in mind, Alfred Letourner, who was a well-known bike racer in 1940, rode one mile on his Schwinn Paramount Racer in 33.05 seconds. That figure to a speed of 108.02 miles per hour.

Al made his ride behind a shield carried by the race car of Ronnie Householder. He used the highest gear ever fitted to a bicycle. The front sprocket had fifty-seven teeth, the rear but six . . . giving the bike a "gear" of 252 (with the average today running from perhaps 40 in low gear to maybe 80 or 90 in high). Letourner's bike was murder to get started, but once underway it was greased lighting.

Do you know what makes a bike balance? You keep it from falling by turning the handlebar (thus the front wheel), and in fact the bike is constantly tipping and would fall but for these minute changes of direction, done almost instinctively once you learn to ride. If the bike is falling to the right, the rider turns the wheel to the right, in the direction of the fall. Falling to the left . . . turn left. Once the bike reaches a moderate speed, leaning will correct a condition of unbalance, and whether you know it or not, you are leaning slightly, one way or the other, while you are riding.

You do not teach this, however, by grasping the seat or the rear fender and attempting to hold the bike upright while the student practices. This method will only lengthen the process of learning, and account for some scratched fenders and knees in the process.

Merely adjust the saddle height so that the novice rider's feet just barely touch the ground. Then allow him to push himself forward exactly as though he were walking one of the early-day Horses. When he feels ready, which will be quickly, he will lift his feet and coast, catching himself the moment he begins to feel he is falling. Very soon he will be coasting further and further, and he will have the problem solved. Instinct will take over.

Modern bikes come in coaster brake models, where you reverse the pedals to apply the brakes, and in gear shift models which generally have pads which squeeze the wheel rims to stop the bike, and in combinations of these two. Gear shift models usually have three, five, or ten speeds, and a few have as many as fifteen different gear combinations and speed ranges.

The three speeds generally have the gears in a rather complicated unit inside the rear hub, with the shift lever on the handlebar or front fork. For more than three speeds, the chain is actually shifted to different sprockets. There will be a cluster of five sprockets of different size on the rear hub, and one, two or three different sprockets where the pedals are mounted. Then there is one or two spring-loaded "derailleurs," one at the rear, and the other, if there is one, at the front. These devices lift the chain off one sprocket, and guide it onto another, according to where the rider has placed shift levers on the handlebars or the front fork.

You can select a low gear for hill climbing, and a high gear for straight and level fast riding, and there is a remarkable easing of pedaling effort as you shift lower and lower.

The model bike you buy (3 speed, 10 speed, coaster brake, etc.) depends on how you plan to use the bicycle. To school and back, shopping, over soft fields and along sandy beaches? Try a solid coaster brake model with fat balloon tires. Price range . . . twenty-five to seventy-five dollars.

For longer touring or commuting, but on relatively easy terrain, city streets, no difficult hills, or for short weekend excursions of just a few miles, consider a three speed model. Equipped with hand brakes (there is one three speed with a coaster brake hub) this will probably cost from fifty to one hundred dollars or so.

There is but one bike for extended, serious riding over all terrain under all conditions, with steep hills, but you must be flexible enough to accom-

did you know...

The Order of Elks represents a substantial enterprise throughout the country, but we wanted to know just how large it is. A questionnaire was distributed to all lodges and results are now known.

As of March 31, 1972 we had 1,531,912 members in 2,175 active lodges.

Our lodges each year spend almost $15 million for taxes, licenses and permits. They employ over 30 thousand people with payrolls that come to $75¼ million. These employees represent well over 23 million man-hours.

Lodges donated their facilities for community use on 47,510 occasions. If a nominal fee had been charged, estimated value would be over $2¼ million.

Subordinate lodges contribute well over $41½ million each year to the state associations so they may carry on their many fine works, major projects, etc.

Well over $15½ million was spent in the purchase of land and buildings, additions and alterations, new construction and furnishings last year alone.

Elks lodges channeled $82,821,646 directly into their communities for purchases of commodities such as food, drinks, sundries, and miscellaneous supplies.

The money spent each year by our lodges puts almost $196 million directly into the economy of our country. This does not take into account approximately $15 million we spend each year for charities, community welfare, crippled children, cerebral palsy, scholarships and the many other social assistance programs we support with no regard whatsoever for race, religion or country of origin.

date to a different riding style. For the famous and very popular ten speed model of today does not "feel" like the old coaster brake models we once knew. The ten speed is a high strung, rather temperamental machine which must be met half-way by its rider. If you will just meet the bike half-way, the bike will come the other half, and you will note a vast improvement in riding responsiveness and excitement. A three speed feels like a truck after a good ten speed.

The ten speed comes as light as a featherweight fifteen pounds, and generally runs but a few pounds more than this for a touring model. The price, for a superior ten speed, can run to over four hundred dollars, though a good one can be bought for perhaps one hundred twenty-five. Anything less than this should be examined carefully for frame joints, cracks, derailleur type, wheel hubs, and other less than quality parts which have lowered the price.

A good way to check a frame of a modern geared bicycle, after a visual check, is to brace the bike on its wheels, holding the handlebar and tilting the bike away from you. Then you put your foot on the pedal hub and push . . . rather hard. The frame should "give" and then spring back when the pressure is relieved. It should feel "alive."

When you pull this test in a bicycle store (gently, of course) the man will appreciate your knowledge. Do it roughly and he'll probably throw you out. Do it at a general department store, and they'll look at you dumb, since they won't have any idea what you're doing to their stock.

Wherever you do it, do it with rubber soles so you won't scratch the bike.

Almost always, when buying a bike for yourself for some real riding, buy your bike from a bike store. Even if you have to wait a month for delivery. The bike store offers top name brands, well-engineered and constructed, good advice on riding, name accessories, and warranty repairs on the premises. For a few dollars more, yes, but this can be money very well spent, especially since you plan to spend quite a few dollars in the first place.

The man in the department store generally doesn't know very much about his bike, about the intricacies of the model, and often he doesn't have the time to tell you about it if he did know.

The golden age of bicycles was in the early 1900's. Now bikes have "come back." For how long? Long enough to spend a hundred and a half on a good one? Nobody really knows, of course, but bikes have already far outdistanced the usual very popular fads that crop up every five years or so. And then they offer more than the usual fad. As well as fun, bikes offer health and transportation.

From all appearances, bicycles are here to stay as a sport and hobby. Schwinn, one of the best known names and largest builders, turns out in one factory 5400 bikes per day, and they are nowhere near keeping up with the demand. They, and every single other manufacturer, are struggling to fill back orders.

Almost certainly, bicycles are entering another long Golden Age. ■

Flag Day, 1973

June 14, 1973 marks the anniversary of the birth of the American Flag with Elks. The observance is traditional and mandatory, and on this day we salute a beautiful symbol of a democratic nation and a great free people. Our flag has given heart, courage, hope, and strength to Americans throughout our nation's history. It has flown over us in time of trouble and of triumph, and it flies today as a sign to all that we are proud of this country's heritage and we are determined to carry the American ideal ever forward.

The American Flag is a symbol of the basic principles that made our nation great. The daily display of our flag and the enthusiastic celebration of Flag Day 1973 represents a visible demonstration of respect for both flag and country and will do much to help bring about a new national solidarity with renewed pride and faith in America.

In addition to the mandatory Flag Day ritual, each lodge has a copy of the Americanism Program brochure for 1972-1973, which shows on page 9 suggestions for Flag Day services, including the dignified disposal of worn and torn flags.

Attention is also called to the special Flag Day Brochure Contest sponsored by the GL Lodge Activities Committee. This contest is for the Flag Day services only and is in addition to the full Americanism program contest sponsored by the GL Americanism Committee.

All lodges are urged to plan an expanded and impressive Flag Day Service for 1973, and it is hoped that all Elks will participate. Those with outstanding programs are especially urged to enter the Flag Day Brochure Contest.

The next time you see an American Flag waving in the breeze, give it a smile as you might to an old friend, and acknowledge that you belong to it because it flies today, as always, a symbol of the greatest free nation on earth.

Dan Davis, Chairman
GL Americanism Committee

■ Andy Rupp wasn't too sure why he was going fishing tonight. His legs ached a bit and he knew he'd have to tie another tippet onto his rather badly knotted up leader. To a younger fly fisherman this would not have posed a serious problem. Andy was eighty-one and his bifocal glasses were almost seven. The blood knot that used to be tied automatically was only slightly less difficult than tying on a new fly.

"Foolish old man," he thought to himself, "you just don't know any better. You have to go fishing, you always have. Should be good tonight. There's a light west wind blowing and the light cahills should be on the water about seven o'clock. It's the twenty-first of May . . . or is it the twenty-second?"

Supper's On The Table

by L. James Bashline

He had difficulty seeing the date on the calendar across the small sitting room that doubled as kitchen and den in his three-room bungalow. Of course, Andy would go fishing tonight. He went fishing every night on his beloved Otter Creek as he had for over sixty-five trout seasons. It was his stream.

He loved it and the creek had returned his kindness by providing good fishing and companionship.

Andy Rupp had been a widower for twenty-five years. His only son had been killed on D-Day and all other relatives were dead or relocated, he was no longer sure where. The small town of Crossman Station had been his home since he was a teenager. His father had owned the town's only hardware store and Andy had worked there all his life. First as a clerk under his father and later as the store's owner. It wasn't a prosperous store by modern standards but it supported his small family well and best of all, it allowed him time to fish every evening. His wife had died in 1947 and two years later

LODGE VISITS

GRAND EXALTED RULER Francis M. Smith

GER Smith's visit to Gulfport, Miss., Lodge for the state association mid-winter conference included his participation in the dedication ceremonies for the new Gulfport Lodge home. ER Lloyd Stroud (left) thanked him for assisting in the activities. PGERs Edward McCabe and William Wall also attended.

Lexington, Mass., Lodge members presented GER and Mrs. Smith with "minute man" hats during their visit to the state. ER Louis Bently (background) represented his lodge.

Shreveport Lodge was host for the official visit of GER Smith and his wife Rae to the state of Louisiana. They were greeted at the lodge by ER and Mrs. Charles E. Scott.

When GER and Mrs. Francis M. Smith arrived at Casper for the mid-winter meeting of the Wyoming Elks State Association, they were driven to the motel in a 1939 bus which was formerly used for sight seeing in Yellowstone Park. Accompanying them were (from left) Theresa Willey, DDGER Roger Percival, DDGER Oliver Foust, and ER Darwin Willey.

BOATING SAFETY

Hack skit writer Bill Shakespeare once said, "The best safety lies in fear." He may not have known much about boating. But still, he had a point.

Most accidents, and certainly that includes boating accidents, are the result of carelessness, negligence, and overconfidence. The new boat owner who sets off near dusk without running lights. The sailor who neglects to carry life preservers for everyone aboard. The eager fisherman who sets out without spare shear pin, oars, gas. Carelessness, negligence, overconfidence. Out on the water, they can be tragic. They can be killers.

So how do you protect yourself from boating accidents? You can live in abject fear, taking Old Bill's words literally. Or you can follow some common sense rules. Such as knowing what current Coast Guard regulations demand of you for the type of craft you own. The regulations vary, depending on size and type of craft. The C. G. does insist on life preservers, fire extinguishers (in most cases), running lights for night use, and bells or whistles for some classes of boats.

Life Preservers. You'll need at least one approved preserver, either jacket, ring, or flotation cushion, for each person aboard. Whichever type you settle on is up to you, though most safety experts agree the jacket type is the most versatile and effective. It can be slipped on and worn comfortably when rough weather threatens. If you want to be really safe, include one jacket for each boater aboard, and then fit each seat with a flotation cushion, whose straps can be slipped into for additional buoyancy in the water.

Fire Extinguishers. Exactly what type extinguishers your boat is required to carry depends on the class it's in. If you're smart, you'll carry at least one extinguisher, even if your class doesn't require it. The type and minimum number of extinguishers you must carry, again, depends on what class your boat is in.

Class A (under 16 feet). Without fixed system in machinery space, one B-I type required; with fixed system in machinery space, none.

Class 1 (16 feet and over, but under 26 feet). Without fixed system in machinery space, one B-I; with fixed system in machinery space, none.

Class 2 (26 feet and over, but under 40 feet). Without fixed system in machinery space, two B-I or one B-II; without fixed system in machinery space, one B-I.

Class 3 (40 feet and over, but not over 65 feet). Without fixed system in machinery space, three B-I or one B-II and one B-I; with fixed system in machinery space, two B-I or one B-II.

Running Lights. If you plan on using your boat at night, you'll need the proper number and type of lights. For Class A and Class 1 boats, that means two lights, a combination red and green on the bow and white on the stern. The bow light must show red to port and green to starboard and be visible for at least one mile. The stern light must be raised to be visible for two miles all around the horizon. Class 2 and 3 boats must show two lights, a red light to port and a green light to starboard, each mounted to be visible a mile straight ahead and up to two points abaft the beam on their respective sides, these in addition to the same type of stern light as for smaller craft.

Bells or Whistles. Class A boats need no sound signal under current Coast Guard regulations. Class 1 boats must have a whistle, either hand or power operated, audible for one-half mile. Class 2 and Class 3 boats must be equipped with a bell which produces "a clear, bell-like tone, of full, round characteristics." In addition, both Class 2 & 3 boats must have whistles. Either hand- or power-operated whistles (at least one) with a range of a mile for Class 2 and a whistle with the same range, but power operated, for Class 3.

CALIFORNIA NEIGHBORS

By Jerry Hulse

WITH THE APPROACH of summer, legions of visitors will be touring the California communities of Monterey and Carmel, following a coastline known both for its dramatic beauty and its relationship to novelist John Steinbeck. Steinbeck's "Cannery Row" was alive with early characters who roamed the alleys and avenues of Monterey (Carmel was and still is the dignified neighbor next door). In Monterey today the hustlers are gone from Cannery Row, along with the fishermen in their oilskins and hip boots, as well as the sardines which caused the big roar along the Row in the first place.

In its heyday the waterfront was a hedgerow of canneries and reduction plants. There was stirk and grime and noise, and along with the noise and the stink it smelled of fortune. All this was before the sardines got wise and paddled off to safer waters, leaving idle a $50-million-a-year industry.

"The cannery whistles scream," wrote Steinbeck, "and all over town men and women come running down to the road to go to work." It was ugly then and it's ugly now. "Cannery Row is a poem," said Steinbeck, "a stink, a grating noise, a quality of light, a tone, a habit, a nostalgia, a dream." His own dream produced the novel. The ink was running over with characters, like Doc Ricketts who operated the Marine biology laboratory on Ocean Ave., and Lee Chong, the grocer.

For the factory owners, every last screaming whistle meant money to be made. Greed, though, killed the Row. Almost overnight the sardines left. Before this Monterey had grown prosperous fishing whales. They too, disappeared. Only the old Whaling Station remains. After the Whales, came the sardines. They arrived in incredible numbers. Residents scooped them from the sea with their bare hands. The salt air smelled of them. It was a stink of fish and money. Even the fog that moved in on a summer night told the story. Canneries hummed by day and night. In one year alone 791,000 tons of sardines were hauled from the sea to Cannery Row. Then suddenly they disappeared. It was like a mine that gives up all of its gold. The supply had seemed unending. But nature revolted. The Row is man's monument to his own greed.

Fortunately for the residents of Monterey, schools of tourists began arriving about the time the schools of sardines left. Property considered worthless when the canneries shut down is creating new fortunes. A couple of realtors are asking $800,000 for one square block fronting on the Row. Only one cannery operates, the Portola. All the rest are restaurants and shops and a cinema that carries Steinbeck's name.

Tourists with their Instamatics and their guidebooks take tables at the Sardine Factory, the Fish Market, York's and Neil De Vaughn's. One of the old canneries is a Polynesian restaurant—the Outrigger. Patrons gaze off at the spotlighted mast of a sunken ship—the marker to a dead past. Still, sometimes there is a haunting stillness along Cannery Row, especially during weekdays when the tourists are away.

Doc is gone, killed a couple of dozen years ago by a train as he crossed the tracks near his lab. He was real flesh and blood, not merely a character who tramped through Steinbeck's novel. His lab remains. So does Lee Chong's grocery. Only instead of groceries, Lee Chong's is running over with antiques. A lot of it is junk, but some of it's quite good.

While the canneries still hummed, the hustlers—painted and perfumed—promenaded on pay day along the Row. The workers brawled and drank and after this they went back to the stinking sardines and the stinking canneries. You could taste the life in the salt air, and Monterey roared. While it's doubtful tourism ever will surpass the dollar days of the sardine stampe, it's keeping alive the Row as well as Monterey.

On Fisherman's Wharf, a few blocks away, gulls soar overhead and seiners put out to sea. Fires roar inside the restaurants and the breeze outside carries a mixture of salt and chowder and fish. At Joe Rappa's (he came to Monterey from Sicily) the menu lists sand dabs, squid, halibut, rock cod, swordfish, salmon and sole, mahi mahi, abalone, crabs, oysters, scallops, clams, lobster, shrimp and prawns. Down the wharf Anastasia's sells cold beer along with walk-away seafood cocktails for 60 cents. Old men play bocci ball behind the old customs house where the American flag was raised in 1846, signaling the passing of California from Mexican to U.S. rule. Before that an Argentine pirate, Hippolyte de Bouchard, sailed into Monterey with a 40-gun privateer and plundered the town, setting afire anything he couldn't carry away. After this Monterey rose from its ashes and the whales came and later the sardines. Now they are gone and the tourists are here.

After doing Monterey, the tourists go next door to the storybook village of Carmel: Disneyland North. Only instead of Main Street and the Magic Castle there's Ocean Ave. and the Pine Inn. Like Disneyland, Carmel plays to the tourists—an industry that doesn't produce smog. Only money.

Outside of Beverly Hills or Palm Springs, maybe, Carmel is possibly the richest town per capita in America. If not the richest then certainly the quaintest. Where else do the residents refuse to put up house numbers or get along without mail delivery, television aerials and live entertainment. If you're looking for action keep driving north toward San Francisco. The hottest thing going one evening last winter was a domino clinic at Bud and Charlotte Allen's La Playa Hotel.

In case you're curious why the houses aren't numbered and the mail isn't delivered it's because no one wants to be disturbed. Privacy is a religion in Carmel. There are shops and inns for the outsiders, but private homes remain hidden among the cypress and Monterey pine. In a town without house numbers and mail delivery everyone queues up at the post office each morning, exchanging pleasantries and bits of gossip. On the other hand, those who come looking for someone who lives here likely will never find them.

It all began when the first resident refused to put up a house number and the custom remains, even into the 70s. What's more, if you live in Carmel you must die to get out of town, the reason being there's no mortuary. Not even a cemetery. And few are dying to leave. Heaven can wait, they say, and what's more, if it exists, it couldn't be any prettier than Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Waves with rainbow in the spray break on a beach with powder-like white sand. The sea is full of rocks and birds and kelp, and the hills are green with trees and golden with poppies when springtime comes. In the beginning Carmel was a writer's refuge. Later the artists came and not far behind were the tourists who now bid for many of their paintings in 65 galleries.

Carmel is unique in a world fretting over change and ecology. It refuses to blacktop one foot of land for cars or to put in parking meters, and so traffic jams sometimes are horrendous. Except for the business district there are few sidewalks or lights, and trees grow in the middle of the streets. In Carmel it would be simpler to destroy a building than to destroy a tree. Indeed it takes an act of the City Council to so much as touch a limb. An ordinance dating from 1916—the year when the town was founded—prohibits the cutting, mutilation or removal of trees and shrubbery on city property. Quaintness doesn't come cheap in Carmel. A real estate office recently listed a three bedroom home with an ocean view for $98,500. Another priced Bing Crosby's old digs—“facing the 13th hole on Pebble Beach”—at $350,000. Alas, if we'd only known. At the turn of the century, realtor S. J. Duckworth was selling lots for $20.

Beyond town other wayfarers take shelter at Del Monte Lodge on Pebble Beach with its golfing greats shown on TV. A roof overhead along with three meals starts at $39 single and $55 double. In turn guests may whack balls across Pebble Beach, Spyglass Hill, Del Monte, Peter Hay and various other private courses within the forest and along the magnificent Monterey Peninsula.

For those who don't swing a club there's tennis, horses, swimming, hunting, fishing and hiking. An ex-hunting lodge, Del Monte is caught up in a 5,600 acre private park reserved for guests of the lodge. Out along the peninsula the famous cypress trees lean their shoulders towards shore at the beckoning of winds that sigh from the sea. And only next door is Pacific Grove—“Butterfly Town, USA”—where millions of monarch butterflies return each fall, just like the swallows do to Capistrano. The school children of Pacific Grove stage a parade in autumn, but anyone hunting butterflies faces getting netted himself—and a stiff $500 fine. ■

WAIST-AWAY™ Helps Trim Stomach Bulges the scientific way

Reducing belts may come and belts may go, but our WAIST-AWAY belt that started it all, continues to trim bulging waistlines long after the imitators have fallen by the wayside. That's because the WAIST-AWAY method is a basically sound, scientific method that works for everyone. The WAIST-AWAY belt was the first with the tested and proved reducing principle that athletes have used successfully for years.

It took a champion athlete to develop the WAIST-AWAY Belt. Athletes in training have used rubber "sweat suits" to lose bulk fast. All that was needed was to find a way to concentrate the body's heating effect on the area bulging with fat.

All belts are not the same

All "reducing belts" are not made with the same materials and design as the WAIST-AWAY. Some imitate, but none can duplicate the original WAIST-AWAY design. Note these important differences:

WAIST-AWAY is made of the same soft, rubber-like composition that the athletes use. This is the most effective material to make your body heat sweat away the excess moisture that adds to bulky fat. And it's the most comfortable to wear next to your body. Not a cheap elastic or cloth.

Reduces — doesn't just hold in

Some belts just hold you in like a corset while you wear them. Waist-Away Belt plus our exercise program actually trims down the bulge; doesn't just squeeze it in.

WAIST-AWAY's special construction creates a soothing massage effect that relieves back and waist tensions. The heating effect developed by WAIST-AWAY helps ease backache and stiffness.

The WAIST-AWAY Belt works on a simple, scientific principle, with no gimmicks. You don't have to wear cumbersome weights. WAIST-AWAY is perfectly safe. There are no vibrating devices in WAIST-AWAY. Do the Waist-Away exercise, then you do whatever you wish while you wear it; do housework, jog, or just sit and watch TV.

Entertainers have found the WAIST-AWAY a wonderful help. Athletes, businessmen, housewives and career girls have enjoyed those benefits, too.

10-Day Money-back Guarantee

Whatever method of reducing you have tried without success, don't give up. Order a WAIST-AWAY belt today on our money-back guarantee. You risk nothing.

Lady Loves Her Zoysia Plugs Saves Time Work and Money

Amazony is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

By Mike Senkiw

Every year I see people pour more and more money into their lawns. They dig, fertilize and lime. They rake it all in. They scatter their seed and roll and water it.

Birds love it! Seeds which aren't washed away by rain give them a feast. But some seed grows, and soon it's time to weed, water and mow . . . until summer comes to burn the lawn into hay, or crabgrass and diseases infest it.

That's what happens to ordinary grass, but not to Zoysia.

"MOWED IT 2 TIMES," WRITES WOMAN

For example, Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn "... is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays as green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in... Last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds—it's just wonderful!"

Wonderful? Yes, Zoysia Grass IS wonderful! Plant it now and like Mrs. Mitter you'll cut mowing by 2/3 . . . never have another weed problem all summer long the rest of your life!

And from Iowa came word that the State's largest Men's Garden Club picked a Zoysia lawn as the "top lawn"—nearly perfect—in its area. Yet this lawn had been watered only once all summer up to August!

These represent but 2 of thousands of happy Zoysia owners. Their experiences show that you, too, can have a lawn that stays green and beautiful thru blistering heat, water bans—even drought!

SPECIAL INTRODUCTORY OFFER. ORDER NOW AND GET UP TO 200 PLUGS FREE

CUTS YOUR WORK, SAVES YOU MONEY

Your deep-rooted, established Amazony lawn saves you time and money in many ways. It never needs replacement . . . ends re-seeding forever. Fertilizing and watering (water costs money, too) are rarely if ever needed. It ends the need for crabgrass killers permanently. It cuts pushing a noisy mower in the blistering sun by 2/3.

WEAR RESISTANT

When America's largest University tested 13 leading grasses for wear resistance, such as foot scuffing, the Zoysias (matrella and japonica Meyer Z-52) led all others.

Your Amazony lawn takes such wear as cookouts, lawn parties, lawn furniture, etc. Grows so thick you could play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Even if children play on it, they won't hurt it—or themselves.

CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS

Thick, rich, luxurious Amazony grows into a carpet of grass that chokes out crabgrass and weeds all summer long! It will NOT winter kill. Goes off its green color after killing frost, regains fresh new beauty every Spring—a true perennial!

NO NEED TO RIP OUT PRESENT GRASS

Now's the time to order your Zoysia plugs—to get started on a lawn that will choke out crabgrass and weeds all summer long and year after year.

Plug it into an entire lawn or limited "problem areas". Plug it into poor soil, "builder's soil", clay or sandy soils—even salty, beach areas, and I guarantee it to grow!

PERFECT FOR SLOPES

If slopes are a problem, plug in Amazony and let it stop erosion. Or plug it into hard-to-cover spots, play-worn areas, etc.

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazony plugs into holes in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style. Every plug 3 sq. inches.

When planted in existing lawn areas plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth, including weeds. Easy planting instructions with order.

Your Own Supply of Plug Transplants

Your established turf provides you with Zoysia plugs for other areas as you may desire.

NO SOD, NO SEED

There's no seed that produces winter-hardy Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Grass and sod or ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed—like weeds, diseases, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. That's why Amazony comes in pre-cut plugs . . . your assurance of lawn success.

Every Plug

Guaranteed to Grow

In Your Area • In Your Soil

- WON'T WINTER KILL—has survived temperatures 30° below zero!
- WON'T HEAT KILL—when other grasses burn out, Amazony remains green and lovely!

Every plug must grow within 45 days or we replace it free. Since we're hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we have to be sure of our product.

Consider the time and money you invest in your lawn and it doesn't pay to struggle with grass that burns out just when you want it most. Order Amazony now and let it spread into thrillingly beautiful turf!

he sold the store to a young couple who still managed to operate it at a profit. He had sold the business on a land contract since the young veteran didn't have much money and Andy still lived on a small payment from him each month. Actually, the note had been paid up years ago but the store's current owner still made a monthly contribution to Andy's well being. Things like that happen in small towns.

Andy had not been a shrewd business man. Fact was, he was a bit too kindly to collect debts with much passion. He had been a fine husband and a patient father. Now, he was not called upon to be either. He was, however, the finest fly fisherman in Brookfield County. Nearly everyone agreed on that. His skill with the fly rod was legendary within a fifty mile radius and before his eyes began to fail at close range, he could tie the most exquisite dry flies that ever kissed the water. He had fished a handful of other streams in this part of the world and had once driven to Quebec to sample the much heralded brook trout fishing of that region. Otter Creek however was his private laboratory. The Town Pool was but two hundred yards from his back porch and for two miles up or down stream he knew every pebble, every submerged log and every trout. He had caught many of them several times. The stream would change a bit each year after the spring thaw but the subtle alterations would soon be cataloged carefully in Andy's mind. Sixty-five years is a long time to fish one particular stream but Andy never tired of it. It was his stream. He was a fortunate man to have a trout stream so close to his back door and he knew it.

As Andy shuffled along the well worn path that angled across his yard, Ira Findley called out; "Going fishing tonight, Andy?"

It was obvious that he was going fishing since he was carrying his rod and was wearing his galoshes. But this was a ritual that the two had acted out for more than fifty years. Ira was ten years Andy's junior but as the years wore on, Andy had learned to accept him as a near equal.

"Yes, I'm going fishing again. It's too bad that some of you youngsters never learned to fish, it would have kept you out of trouble."

"Well good luck, see you in the morning!"

Having a cup of coffee with Ira in the morning was a habit that they both enjoyed. Ira had never fished. He was always too busy with his garden. Waste of time, Andy always thought. Not that he didn't enjoy reaping the benefits of Ira's labor, it was just that fishing seemed like so much more fun. They said the same words to each other almost every night or reasonable facsimiles. It was a pleasant relationship. Neither understood the other exactly but that didn't matter. Ira always listened over the morning's coffee about Andy's previous night's fishing and Andy listened just as patiently to the tales of Ira's difficulties with the cutworms that were about to devour his tomato plants. Things like that happen in small towns.

It was seven-thirty when Andy reached the Town Pool. It had taken him nearly ten minutes to walk the path leading to it. The walk tired him.

"This may be my last year for fishing," thought Andy as he sat down heavily on the old milking stool that he had carried to the stream's edge the week before. He used to fish several pools during an evening but now he was satisfied to just sit at the Town Pool and wait for a rising fish. The milking stool made the waiting easier.

"Well, maybe I can last out another year. Caught two nice trout here last night and from the looks of things there should be a good hatch on tonight. Got a nice fat eighteen incher over next to the far bank two weeks ago on a Red Quill . . . or was that last year? Oh heavens!" He continued to hold the one-man conversation, "I'm really getting old. Can't remember if it was two weeks ago or last year!" As he sat there with his hand holding the grip of the old three-piece bamboo rod, he was suddenly hit by the fact that he was very tired.

"You're tired, too!" He addressed the statement to the rod. "You've caught a pile of trout for me. Let's see now, how old are you? Thirty years, thirty-five? Whatever age you are, you deserve a rest too. Maybe next year, we'll both hang it up. I'll bet you and I have caught a thousand trout out of this pool. Put almost all of 'em back too. Save a few for Ira's breakfast two or three times a year. Funny about Ira, he doesn't care much about fishing but he sure does like to eat 'em. Sarah liked trout once in a while too and so did Jerry. But they're gone now. I'm almost gone too. I wonder if anyone will give Ira a trout or two when I'm not here any longer. What was that? I thought I heard a voice calling!"

The old man stood up and turned towards the cluster of houses that made up the village of Crossman Station. He cupped his left hand over his ear.

"Guess it must have been the wind in the trees or maybe some kids hollering." He sat down again on the stool.

It was a fact, Andy had taken care of Otter Creek. He had planted willows where there were none or where they had been bulldozed out. He had built a dozen rock wing-dams over the years and most of them still existed. He had encouraged more of the local fishermen to fish with flies and return most of their catch. And, he was most proud of this, he had taught two generations of Crossman Station youngsters how to use the flyrod. Most of them had moved away after they became adults but many of them returned each spring and summer for a few days of fishing. Things like that happen in small towns.

Andy's reverie was interrupted by a splash on the far side of the pool. It was the rise of a sizable brown trout. He had not seen the swirl but the sound of it indicated a fish of respectable size. A two minute wait. The fish rose again. A one minute wait. Another rise . . . and again. And now, in the slick tail water at the pool's exit, another trout kicked up water. At the ruffle-speckled nose of the pool, a third trout showed himself. Struggling mayfly duns were beginning to appear in numbers.

Andy had seen his opening act countless times before and it was always as exciting as ever. A prickle of anticipation made his eyesight a little sharper and his arms and legs a bit springier.

"But wait, there's that voice again! Someone's calling to me. Who in the world would want me this evening?" Andy was puzzled. "I certainly wasn't expecting any visitors. And even if I was, the fish are just starting to rise and one of them looks like a nice one."

Andy rose slowly from the stool and unhooked the fly from the keeper ring. A jerk or two on the reel and at once the old rod began to flex back and forth as line was extended for his first cast of the evening.

"Halloooooo!"

This time, there was no mistake. Somebody was calling. Andy's first cast was just about to be released so he didn't turn around this time but allowing the slack line to coast through his hand, he watched the fly touch the water and answered without turning his head.

"Who is it?"

"It's me, dad. Mom says that supper is just about ready. About five minutes and we're having your favorite . . . scalloped potatoes and ham". Just then the big trout sucked in the fly.

"What in the world is happening! Jerry has been dead for over twenty-five years and how would anyone know that my favorite dinner was . . ."

The big trout made a race for the tail of the pool and the battered single action reel rasped indignantly. Andy's practiced hand eased up at just the right second to avoid a broken tippet and the hook-jawed brown suddenly swapped ends and raced for the cover of the willow roots near the place he had been hooked. Andy caught a glimpse of the fish and knew immediately that it was the largest brown he had ever hooked in his life!

"Boy, that looks like a whale, dad. Mom will forgive you for being late if you manage to land that one!"

"Great Scott," Andy thought. "Here I've hooked the biggest trout in Otter Creek and some idiot is playing games with me . . . or else I've lost my mind entirely".

He didn't turn around to see who was on the bank. The critical part of the battle was at hand. The wise brown was trying to force his way into the maize of willow roots and Andy was putting on all the pressure the leader would bear. Finally, the trout eased off and grudgingly moved to the center of the pool. The battle was turning in favor of the angler and Andy could now see the fish quite clearly. It was a full two feet long and was indeed a new Otter Creek record.

Andy backed up cautiously, leading the giant fish into the shallows. The trout made one last effort to hang in the deeper water and suddenly the fight left him. One more gentle stroke of the rod tip and the great black spotted fish was gasping on his side on a tiny sand bar.

Exhausted, Andy sat down beside the fish and touched its broad side with a trembling hand. It was his biggest trout . . . ever! Immediately the thought struck him. Should he kill this fish and accept the accolades that would go with it or should he release it? His problem was quickly solved.

"Might as well let him go, dad. I saw you catch him and that's all that matters. Come on now, Mom is holding supper and besides you can come back after you eat, if you want to. I'll come with you."

Andy slowly turned his head and stared straight at the figure that stood beside him. For some reason he did not consider the sight unusual. It was his son. He was just as Andy had last seen him. Half grown out crew-cut with the proud, erect posture of a kid just out of basic training. He was wearing his favorite pair of soleless moccasins.

Andy grasped the tiny dry fly hook between his thumb and forefinger and twisted the barb loose. Gently, he lifted the spent trout and lowered it slowly into the water. The big brown flared its gills widely and began to breathe heavily. The breathing soon steadied and Andy loosened his hold on the fish's tail. With great dignity the giant trout eased into the black water, back into Otter Creek. Andy shifted to one knee, then slowly rose to a standing position and managed one last look as the trout vanished into the depths of the Town Pool.

"Some fish," Andy shook his head, "and I was talked into letting him go by my imagination." He looked around. There was no one near him. Nor had there been. Just an old man's rusty brain playing tricks on him.

"Come on dad, supper's on the table and mom's going to be mad if you don't get there pretty soon."

There was the voice again and now Andy could see the figure of Jerry headed up the path towards the house. Suddenly Andy knew it was the truth.

"It was Jerry and supper was waiting and it will certainly be nice to see Sarah again! And of course, Jerry was right. Scalloped potatoes and ham was his favorite and even more important, his big trout had been witnessed!"

It was Ira who found him there beside Otter Creek the next morning. He was lying peacefully on his side with the number fourteen light Cahill clenched tightly between his thumb and forefinger. The imprint of a huge trout was still there in the wet sand. It was a heart attack, pure and simple, guessed Ira. The only strange thing were the two sets of tracks leading away from the creek. One set of footprints in the sand looked like Andy's old galoshes and the other set appeared to be smooth bottomed moccasins. Ira said nothing about this to anyone. Things like that happen in small towns. ■

Eloquent P.O.W.

□ Now that active American participation in the war in southeast Asia has officially ended and many of our prisoners of war have been returned, we give thanks that this terrible experience is history. It was the longest war in our history; one which polarized many of our people into factions which did much to keep us upset internally and damage our reputation internationally.

It was a moving event to witness the live telecasts of some of our P.O.W.s as they stepped onto free soil once again at Clark Air Base in the Philippines. Many of those who sat at home and watched these men deplane had mixed emotions; joy and elation at their return and a profound sadness as they thought about what these men had gone through for so many years in the hands of the Vietnamese communists, north and south.

We'll never forget the words of the first returnee to step from the plane, Navy Captain Jeremiah Denton. He moved to a battery of microphones, glanced left and right, swallowed a lump in his throat and uttered three short sentences which will surely be quoted by historians from now on:

"We are happy to have the opportunity to serve our country under difficult circumstances. . . ."

"We are profoundly grateful to our commander-in-chief and to our nation for this day. . . ."

"God bless America!"

There is very little he could have added which would have had a greater impact on all of us.

Captain Denton had been a prisoner since July 18, 1965 . . . 7½ years in the hands of the communists in Hanoi. He had plenty of time to think about what he might say should he ever again become a free man and return to the United States, yet he chose only three short sentences.

We think he chose well.

There was no bitterness, no recrimination, no hint of martyrdom in what he said or how he said it . . . just a pride in his country, his uniform and his leaders. There was a pride in having done his duty as a member of our armed forces. His entire bearing emphasized this fact. Every good American must have shared in Captain Denton's pride.

Every good American must have been profoundly moved when he said with a sincerity one could not miss, "God bless America."

Denton, nor any of the other returning POWs, offered no thanks to or even mention of any of those who condemned our country and called us all sorts of names for our participation in the grinding war in southeast Asia.

We of the Order of Elks say to Captain Denton and to all of our returned prisoners, "We are happy we have men such as you to serve our country under difficult circumstances. We are profoundly grateful to you now and forever.

"God bless America!"

Choppers and Paramedics

□ As terrible as all wars are, it seems that each results in some good to future generations as scientific, technical and medical knowledge make important advances. The war in Southeast Asia was no exception.

The medical profession learned a great deal more about the treatment of injuries, shock, surgery and so on . . . but one of the most significant advances was the development and training of paramedics. These young men were given much more training than the medics we have had for so many hundreds of years and their skills helped save many a life.

We had helicopters long before the Vietnam war, but never as sophisticated nor as fast as they are now . . . nor in such numbers.

Combining the "choppers" with paramedics, portable field hospitals and more knowledgeable medical professionals made it possible to save hundreds . . . perhaps thousands of lives which might have otherwise been lost. It was not at all uncommon for a wounded or injured man to be on an operating table within 10 to 15 minutes of being hurt.

We have thousands of helicopters in our inventory which will probably be declared surplus and there are thousands of trained pilots to operate them. Large numbers of the young men trained as paramedics have been returned to civilian life, some of whom will probably have a difficult time finding employment in a short time.

Instead of putting the "choppers" in mothballs and discharging the pilots and medical specialists who need civilian jobs, why not put them into civilian use with state and city police departments?

Think of the lives they could save in using their knowledge and training to greatest advantage by taking care of injured people who need immediate medical attention.

This is not really an original idea . . . it is already in use in Illinois and Maryland with many outstanding successes to its record.

As a bonus, these helicopters could do a great job of helping to combat crime, as many police departments with choppers can testify.

It's an ambitious, costly, complicated program but one which seems worthy of much time, thought and energy.

Free! Up to five extra miles of water skiing.

Johnson's 65 gives you more skiing, more cruising than comparable competitive outboards.

You get this extra mileage from every six-gallon tank of gas at mid-range speeds because the 65 is exhaust tuned and Loop-Charged.

Exhaust tuning means we use exhaust sound waves to pack more of the new fuel charge into the cylinders. For more power. On less gas.

Loop-Charging brings fuel in and pushes the exhaust out in one continuous power loop. Again, you get more performance without using more gas.

But we didn't stop there. Our MagFlash™ capacitor

OUR GUARANTEE* IS UNCONDITIONAL

You'll never want or need any other knives again once you slice, dice, chop, mince, bone, fillet, trim and carve with this Original and Genuine Dione Lucas Cutlery Set

If you ever do need another set of knives . . . whatever your reason . . . your money will promptly be refunded (including your postage and any sales tax you may have paid!). There is no time limit on this "guaranteed" guarantee. Your request will be honored next week, next month, next year, ten years from now, any time at all.

HOW, WHY CAN WE DO IT?

Molybdenum Chrome Steel, the essential ingredient in our knives, is a virtually indestructible compound with the very special ability of creating razor-sharp edges so hard, so tough, so durable, they make ordinary sharpening unnecessary forever. When you care to, all you do to freshen an edge is gently hone it on the back of an old china plate. Molybdenum, the metal of the 21st century, whether you can pronounce it or not, makes it possible.

If you've had trouble in the kitchen or at carving time — hacking away at a piece of meat, trying to slice paper-thin portions . . . waiting for the turkey to cool and become "cuttable" . . . fuming at those outdated dull knives that pierce nothing but your fingers . . . if you've ever screamed at the countless hours you've spent slicing, dicing, peeling to achieve the gourmet touch you so much want, you should not miss this unique opportunity. Because these fine knives won't dull, bend, rust or lose their hardness. They are handsome, lightweight and elegant with unique squared tips and clean uncluttered lines that protect your fingers while you work. Handles of handsome Rosewood are impervious to grease and oil and safety-bonded to the blades.

These are the reasons Dione Lucas, world-famous French chef and gourmet cookbook author, had her name engraved on every blade.

These are the reasons you should order now at the new bargain price of $14.98.

INTERNATIONAL GOURMET KNIFE SET
The original Dione Lucas Gourmet Knives: 14 1/2" English Roast Beef Slicer, and All-Purpose Carving Knife; 11 1/2" French Cook's Knife and Cleaver; 11" Chinese Vegetable Chopper; 8 1/2" American Paring Knife.

Now this remarkable set of knives — formerly sold at $19.98 — has for the first time ever been reduced to only $14.98 for the complete set of 4.

So sharp, it cuts see-through slices onion-skin thin. Slices vegetables, bread, luncheon meats, cheese as fine as with an electric slicer!

Dice, slice, chop, mince without wincing. Peel cucumbers, flower radishes, make party-pretty rosettes! Square tips protect fingers.

Cut out your carving problems with this

* GUARANTEE

The original Dione Lucas Gourmet Knives are unconditionally guaranteed to be the sharpest, toughest, most durable knives you have ever used. Their edges from tip to handle are designed to last indefinitely although occasional "dressing up" can be done simply by gently honing them for a few seconds on the back of an old porcelain plate. If, for any reason whatsoever, you are not absolutely delighted with their performance, you may return the set for a full refund (including postage and any sales tax paid) at any time.
